"Mame" auditions end

By GREG GOLDFARB
Virginia Beach Sun Editor

"I was very pleased to see so many people come audition for 'Mame,'" said Virginia Beach Little Theatre director Mac McManus.

"I had to make many real tough decisions in casting this play, but I'm very pleased with who we have to perform."

Approximately 150 area residents turned out to audition for 30 parts in the musical "Mame," which is due to open Friday, Feb. 8, and run every Friday and Saturday through March, according to McManus.

McManus said the VBLT has been operating for about 30 years and that this is the first play he's directed in six years.

"I don't have time nowadays," he said not mentioning his 6:30 a.m. daily television show.

"But I'm always gratified to see such community support and response to the cultural arts."

The former VBLT president said there is many talented people at the beach.

"The people who come to these auditions are very talents," he said.

"Plus, we always draw people from the surrounding areas; I see a good show ahead."

Cast members of the upcoming show include: "Mame," - Betty Hudson; "Vera," - Carol Gilchrist; "Agnes Gooch" - Suzanne Marlow; "Mature Patrick Dennis," - John Spencelli; "Beauregard Burnside," - Dave Jones; "Mother Burnside," - Mary Daniels; "Sally Cato," - Rosemary Cathers; "Babcock," Ed Hurd; "Mr. Upson," - John Peters; "Mrs. Upson," Jennifer Kregor; and "Gloria Upson," - Janet Whitbeck.

"Lindsey Woolsey," - Walter Haltigan; "Ro," - Scott Brinson; "Uncle Jeff," - Carl Hensen; "Cousin Fan," - Dot Jones; "Junior Babcock," - Scott Britton; "Peggy," - Leoni Culpepper; "Madam Stanislawski," - Shirley Hurd; and "Gregor," Jeff Cantrelli."

1979 - The OMNI International Hotel in Norfolk set up 920 seats in preparation for the Virginia Orchestra Group's New Year's Eve party. It featured Virginia Beach resident Walter Noona and the 50 member Virginia Pops Orchestra.

"We had around 900 people at the party," said VOG spokesperson Sandy Vick.

"This is the third or fourth year the VOG has sponsored the party at the OMNI," she continued, "but this is the first time Walter Noona has performed at it; in fact, this time, he brought his trio."

Virginia Beach florist

Price has the winning touch

By GREG GOLDFARB

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

"...and I thought to myself, if I could just own the 'Virginia Beach Florist,'" said local businesswoman Barbara A. Price, "I will have fulfilled a long sought ambition."

Starting her flowered career back in high school, when she operated a one-room floral shop in the back of her grandmother's grocery store in Chesapeake, Price, 39, now owns three floral shops in Virginia Beach and one in Chesapeake.

First shop in 1973

But, she maintains that the "Virginia Beach Florist," located at 933 Laskin Road, is the "granddaddy" of floral shops in Tidewater.

"I opened my first floral shop in the Arrowhead shopping center in 1973," Price said, "and it soon expanded in size from one shop to two."

"Then I decided I wanted a location closer to the oceanfront, so I opened 'Hilltop Florist' in 1975."

"In that same year I opened another shop in South Norfolk in part of an old movie house. All three shops have done well."

"But the granddaddy of floral shops came my way one day in 1976 when I got a call from 'Virginia Beach Florist' owners Jack Brothers and Curtis Marks."

Price said her prior reputation in the floral business is what prompted the call, plus the fact that the owners were ready to sell.

"The owners called me and said it was obvious to them that I was doing well in the floral business," she said.

"They said they wanted to meet with my husband and me and discuss the possibility of buying their business. They were tired I think, and ready to get out of it."

"To get it, Ernest and I had to make a few deals, but we finally swung it; and the granddaddy of floral shops sure has paid off for us; with a little help from our great employees."

"I think that when I bought the shop, I finally accomplished everything I had ever wanted to do."

Comes from big family

Maybe the fact that Price comes from a big family, and had to compete with seven other brothers and sisters, has something to do with her inner drive for success.

Price is the daughter of Kelly and Geneva Dunlow, who live in Chesapeake.

Her father is a local railroad foreman; and her mother, a homemaker.

She has two brothers and five sisters, namely: Curtis, 33, a naval electrician; Woody, 29, employed with a local railroad; Gladys, 37, a homemaker; Loretta, 35, a homemaker; Joyce, 28, employed with a local bank; Rose, 24, employed with the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce; and Shelly, 17, a student at Oscar Smith High School. They all live in Chesapeake but Gladys, who lives at the beach.

Price is married to Ernest Price, a self-employed businessman. They have five children and live in the Witchduck Point section of Virginia Beach.

Their children's names, occupations, and ages are: Ernie Jr., 22, who works with his father; Elaine, 20, a student and works part-time with her father; Donald Newhart, a local railroad foreman; Russell, 8, and Paul, 6, both students at Pembroke Meadows Elementary School.

Began working in high school

Price was born in South Norfolk, and attended grades 1-7 at the Rona B. Wright Elementary School.

She attended grades 8 and 9 at Truitt Junior High School, and graduated from Oscar Smith High School in 1956.

"I worked a lot during school," Price remembers.

"I was in a program which required me to go to school half a day, and work the other half."

"I started working for 'Giant House of Flowers,' and really started learning the floral business; that's because I did everything for them you could possibly imagine."

"Also during high school, I worked in a one room floral shop in my grandmother's grocery store."

"And even though I also spent a lot of time in high school decorating things for special events, I never had any trouble with the books."

After graduation, she started working for Virginia National Bank, "to bring in some money."

"I'm not sure, even after 20 years in it, why I went into the banking business," she said.

"I had a girlfriend in it, plus I had ambitions of getting out on my own and working; besides, the one-room florist shop wasn't bringing in much money."

"I'll never forget the man who hired me though, it was J.M. Jones Jr. who hired me right off the bat."

"I started as a teller then went to bookkeeper, then back to teller, next to head teller, rate teller; and in addition, I trained over 20 employees at one time in less than a year."

"But I left the full time banking business on two occasions in those 20 years. One time to work part time for a florist, and another time and finally, to raise a family."

"I knew that after I started having children, I would spend a lot of time with them, so I started looking into the floral business. The rest is history."

Price's Catering Service

Prices' latest business venture is "Prices Catering Service," located at 1001 Laskin Road.

"We do floral arrangements for a lot of weddings," she explained, "and as we'd start talking about how to decorate the cake, people would ask us if we did food catering. We used to not; but now we do."

A close family

Price and her family attend The Rock Church, located in Kempsville.

During the summer they live in an oceanfront house. "I try to spend a lot of time with the children at the beach house because of the summer holidays," she said.

"And then, if I have to work, they swim at the local pool where they can be watched by a lifeguard, and I came back to pick them up as soon as possible."

"During the winter, we take the children snow skiing just about every weekend; the family also takes a fishing trip in Key West in February."

Children are most important

The children, Price said, are the most important elements of her and her husband's life.

"Neither my husband nor myself will ever put business before our children," Price said.

"Friendship means more than success"

—Price

"I don't have other people do things for my children, I do it myself."

"We take Paul and Russell boating, swimming, skiing all year long."

"It's our children that keep Ernest and I feeling young. I have maids, but we raise the children."

"In fact, we don't keep our children in private school because we feel the Virginia Beach school system is splendid, and good for them."

No place but the beach

And not only does Price feel the city's school system is excellent, she feels likewise toward the city itself.

"I've lived in Virginia Beach for 20 years," she said, "and I don't feel there is anywhere else to live but the beach."

"My husband and I have traveled a lot, and I like Virginia Beach as well as anywhere I've seen."

She is a member of at least 12 local, national, and international floral Associations, and has been asked to serve as a board member on several.

"But," she said, "I don't have time."

"We haven't changed"

Price said that even though she has a successful floral business, and her husband, a successful drive-in movie chain, they still haven't changed.

"Ernest and I are both down to earth people," she said.

"We both have our businesses, and we take proper care of them. But deep down inside of us, we haven't changed."

Score 53-52

'Tough defense; sharp shooting'

The tough defense combined with superb shooting to give the Stallions a 26-22 halftime lead.

Green Run was able to extend its lead to six by the end of the third quarter when they led 40-34.

Going tough

"The team stayed composed when they had to and they handled the press real well. We beat a good team with a true team effort," Cochrane explained.

The Broncos of Franklin made the victory a tough one for Green Run as they staged a comeback in the fourth quarter.

Pushing the tempo of the game to a speed of their liking with a fullcourt press, the Broncos were able to take a one point lead, 48-47, with 2:54 left.

From there it was a seesaw battle to the end with neither team enjoying more than a one point lead.

At the end it was two free throws by Frank Anderson with 10 seconds left that gave the Stallions their victory.

Plenty of chances

Franklin coach Mike Head explained, "We had so many opportunities in the fourth quarter to take a three point lead that would have won it. It was just one of those games where the ball didn't go through the rim for us."

"We battled and battled, I have nothing to complain about."

"We came into the game with the idea of making it a halfcourt game. I felt we could be more patient and execute the fundamentals," Cochrane said of his game plan.

"They're a quick, talented team and we didn't want to run and shoot with them," he continued.

Young team

Green Run starts as many as three sophomores at times and has been known to play four sophomores at a time.

"I've played a variety of combinations to find the right one," said Cochrane.

"Wali Jones was very composed, he has more composure than most sophomores. And he is very smart, he has a good sense of what is happening on the court," Cochrane said.

Jones was not the only individual to turn in an exceptional performance. James Buchanan scored 15 points.

"This was Buchanan's best game so far. It was close to the best game he can play. But again everyone contributed," explained Cochrane.

The victory lifted the Stallions' record to 2-3 as they returned to action in the Beach district.

Beach residents learn

Plenty of wild duck during first full week of 1980

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoor Writer

I had began to wonder all season if I was going to see any decent weather for duck hunting and I have to admit it was beginning to look very doubtful.

On New Years Eve I decided that I would get my gear ready to go, so I could depart on New Years day for the Eastern Shore and take pot luck on the weather. And as you probably already know, the Winter of 1980 came in with duck hunting in mind.

Loaded for Duck

Tuesday evening (New Years Day) I departed Chesapeake around 5:30 p.m. in the company of Blazer, my five year old Chesapeake Bay retriever. We had my duck boat in tow and it was loaded to the gunnels with duck and goose decoys.

We were headed for Pocomoke, Md. where I would spend the night with Bill Borum, my hunting companion for the week.

On Wednesday morning the wind was out of the north at 20-25 mph so Bill and I had decided to hunt Chincoteague Island, Va.

We arrived at the duck blind on Chincoteague Bay at 5:45 a.m. after a wet, cold and choppy boat ride from the boat ramp.

We had to warm up a little before we could even think about putting out the duck decoys and even then it was a real trick in the strong northerly wind.

Once the decoys were out and we were situated inside the blind, things were not much better. The strong north wind and the full moon had caused higher than normal tides and we found ourselves standing in about 1 1/2 foot of cold water, and the tide was still rising.

We had to surrender the seat to Blazer so she could keep warm and dry until she was needed, and I was hoping it wouldn't be too long.

Hairheads come

It wasn't long after dawn before a pair of hairheads (hooded mergansers) came in over our decoys, circled behind the blind and then headed back into the wind to stool to us.

Bill and I had already decided that on a lone duck he would shoot first and on two or more I would take the ones to the left and he the right.

As the pair of drake mergansers set their wings to slow their speed for the landing Bill and I slowly raised up out of the blind and took aim and shot.

Both ducks dropped between us and the decoys and Blazer was all set for the command to go but the wind was blowing the ducks toward the blind so I decided to keep her dry.

As the morning went on the wind increased and the marsh behind the blind began to disappear below the unusually high tide.

It was obvious to Bill and I that we had seen the better part of this day because the high wind and tides would drive the ducks into more sheltered waters.

Onancock, Va.

As I told you back at the beginning of the season, Bill and I have a cabin out in the marsh near Onancock, Va. and this was to be our destination on Thursday.

We had always had our best luck there so we figured we would give it a try, even though the weather was looking like spring was on its way.

We arrived at the cabin at 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, unloaded our gear and started to prepare the ducks we had killed over at Chincoteague the day before.

We figured the ducks would be done by the time we finished hunting that evening if we put them over a low heat before we left. Besides that it is always nice to end a days hunting with a duck dinner.

At 2 p.m. Bill and I strolled out on a small cove about a mile across the marsh from the cabin. The action was a little slow until just before sunset, when the geese left the fields and headed out into the Chesapeake Bay to

We were able to decoy a small flock of about 20 in to us but was only able to down three. By the time we had retrieved our game, the sun was getting low on the horizon so we decided to pick up our decoys and head back for the cabin.

Normally we would have stayed a little longer but this evening we had that duck dinner on our minds.

"The smell of duck"

Back at the cabin the smell of the nearly done duck dinner was enough to arouse the slavia glands of a vegetarian. I could hardly wait while Bill prepared the dumplings and greens that we would have with the ducks.

Finally it was done and it had been well worth waiting for. I told Bill it was the best I had ever ate but it seems I come up with the same line every year. Later that night as Bill and I were out on the dock making sure the boat was secure I noticed that the wind had changed around to the northeast.

I told Bill that I figured we would have some bad weather on Friday. I guess most of my notion was wishful thinking.

On Friday morning as Bill and I were having breakfast I made mention of a picture on the wall of two hunters in a duck boat located on the edge of a marsh dump and it was snowing so hard you could barely see them.

I told Bill, in my best Eastern Shore drawl, "it would be right fair if we was sitting where they are. We could kill all the ducks we wanted."

We both laughed as we started to clear the dishes.

At 6 a.m. we were back on that little cove we had hunted the day before but as the sun came up the action was slow. It was obvious that it was going to be another bluebird day.

Only one buffhead

By 11 a.m. we had bagged only one buffhead so we decided to go back to the cabin and then head out closer to the bay.

While we were eating lunch the northeaster had increased and clouds had began to hide the sun. By 1 p.m. we were stooled out on a small island on the edge of Tangier Sound and the weather was getting worse.

We both had left our foul weather gear back at the cabin, so when it started to sleet and rain I left Bill on the little island and returned to the cabin for the foul weather gear.

I returned in 45 minutes and Bill had already shot his limit of Buffhead. It only took about 30 minutes and I had mine. The foul weather was doing its thing for us.

"The ride back"

The ride back to the cabin put us head on into the northeaster and the rain had turned to hail mixed with snow. It would really sting your face, but don't get me wrong - this is what I had wanted.

Foul, blustery weather.

On Saturday morning the wind was still out of the northeast but the snow and hail had stopped. Bill and I had got our limit each day so we decided we would gun for a couple of hours and then pack up and head home.

By 9:30 a.m. we decided to call it a day, we had not fired a shot. After we had taken up all the decoys and loaded the remaining supplies from the cabin, we noticed a sudden drop in the temperature.

As we headed back to the boat ramp it started to snow. By the time we had the boat on the trailer it was snowing hard and the wind was blowing 30-35 mph.

Bill and I decided to give it one more chance and headed for Chincoteague Island.

We first-headed for the boat ramp we had used on Wednesday, but by the time we got there the wind was out of the northwest, and the water was really rough.

We also couldn't see a duck flying anywhere. Bill said that they were probably on the leeward side of the island where the water wasn't so rough and they had sheltered from the driving snow.

Tom's Cove

When then headed for the only boat ramp we know of, which was at Tom's Cove, a campground on the east side of the island. As we departed the boat ramp the snow had just begun to stick to the ground.

We ran several miles down the channel that runs between Chincoteague and Assateague Islands, until we found a small gut running into the marsh.

We had to find a good spot to secure the floating duck blind, because the wind was blowing the snow to secure the floating duck blind, because the wind was blowing the snow parallel to the water and it seemed to be increasing in velocity all the time.

After securing the blind we decided that due to the weather conditions we would only put out the geese decoys and about eight black duck decoys.

The visibility was getting worse and we were afraid we wouldn't be able to find them all if we put out the entire set.

While we were sitting there and the boat was being covered by snow, Bill began to laugh and asked me if I knew what this reminded him of.

I knew right away what he had on his mind. The two miserable hunters in the duck picture back on the cabin wall. The scene must have been identical. It sure was snowing and we were really cold.

Several geese

It didn't take long and we had several geese and our limit on ducks, so we decided to call it a day, we both were freezing and there seemed to be no shelter from the cold wind driven snow.

I know I had wished for it, but several times that afternoon we exchanged thoughts on the forth coming drum fishing season and the warm spring days we would spend waiting for a strike.

Local builder's association

Chrysler - An opinion

By LIN J. COOPER

Special to the Sun

Grabbing a goodly share of headlines in the past several months has been the issue of the federal government's bailing out the Chrysler Corporation.

Just as many American cities wondered some years back about the feasibility and need for the federal government to rescue the city of New York, there are many businesses and industries today taking a hard look at the government's willingness to assist a private profit-making corporation.

The homebuilding industry is in difficulty too, but it has not received the attention or publicity that Chrysler or Ford or the remainder of the automotive industry has achieved.

It makes one wonder why since the economic impact of the housing industry is just as significant if not more so, than that of the automotive industry.

Perhaps part of the answer is in how the two industries are composed. While the automotive industry is supported by a few giants, the homebuilding industry is made up of thousands of small, independent entrepreneurs loosely linked by common interests and objectives.

Beach builders

Virginia Beach builders are a somewhat amorphous group. Unlike the image of the giant builder clearing hundreds of acres at a time and rapidly erecting row upon row of houses, the average builder doesn't fit that image at all.

Forty percent of Virginia Beach builders construct fewer than 10 homes a year, while an additional 26 percent build no more than 25 homes a year. Less than 10 percent of the builders in this area build between 50 and 100 units a year.

Who are these more than 300 Beach builders? Most of them are between 35 and 49 years of age. Of those with business volumes of under a million dollars a year, a third have some college, but an interesting figure of 29 percent have only a high school diploma or less.

The homebuilding industry remains one of the few in which persons can still enter and be highly successful without a high degree of formal education.

The ease of entry into the profession is also exemplified in the fact that almost a third of Beach builders have been in residential construction for less than five years.

However, that's balanced off at the other end of the spectrum by the 22 percent who've been active for more (See, 3000, page 8)

Will Carter fire Jordan?

By LEIGH FENLY

Special to the Sun

Jimmy Carter recently proclaimed that he would rather lose the 1980 re-election than fire ranking aide Hamilton Jordan — Jordan whose questionable social graces made national headlines, whose reputed drug use led to federal investigations, whose lack of management, by some accounts, keeps White House decision-making in a tailspin.

Why save Jordan?

It is not the man; says Michael Medved. It is the role. By living on black coffee and Tab through 18-hour days of loyalty, Jordan has cemented himself close to Mr. Carter's bloodstream, Medved says.

It is a curious intimacy born out of the loneliness of power — an intimacy citizens have been paying for since Civil War times when Congress first appropriated pay for presidential staff.

Medved calls the president-to-aide relationship foxhole camaraderie or male bonding, or, in the worst cases, perverse loyalty.

In "The Shadow Presidents," his second book since "What Really Happened to the Class of '65," he establishes the importance of the often-neglected figures closest to the President.

The bushy-headed Medved had his first experience with politics when he dropped out of Yale Law School to campaign for a congressional candidate who lost the bid. As a speech writer, he realized the intimacy of the aide relationship.

"I was sleeping on the couch in my candidate's living room. I was in a position where I saw something I'd written go out over the wire services as if the politician had said it. I know he had never even seen it. I wondered if that happened at higher levels and, of course, it does."

Through interviews with aides and substantial research, Medved, 34, looks at the men behind the throne, who themselves wield enormous power — and often affect how history regards presidential effectiveness. Andrew Johnson's reputation suffered by relying on his alcoholic son, Rutherford B. Hayes by hiring his close, fumbling friend, William Rogers. Mr. Carter, in his way, has repeated their mistakes.

Mr. Carter's mistake, says Medved, was choosing the loyalty of Jordan over aides with management experience and broad-based goals.

"Jordan was there through the losses, in the 10-year painful, slow climb. I think Carter feels that Jordan is magic."

By refusing to sever the relationship, the President is putting friendship ahead of the country, says Medved. "He did it with Bert Lance. A president must be ruthless in using the people around him. Jordan is of no use to the President. He is a tremendous liability."

Richard Nixon, he says, made the same mistake choosing H.R. Haldeman for his strong, invincible loyalty. According to Medved, Nixon clung to Haldeman for emotional support, calling him three or four times a night for reassurance. Woodrow Wilson fell into the same trap, relying on Col. Ed House.

Their relationship was so close, Medved calls it "romantic." "Wilson refused to use House to help push through the Treaty of Versailles because he thought House had betrayed him. They were in the midst of a lovers' quarrel."

In recent history only Presidents John F. Kennedy and Gerald R. Ford chose advisers with distance. Kennedy's hard-drinking, good-timing friend Dave Powers was given a powerless position, while Ted Sorensen, "a cold fish of a guy," became his aide.

McCloud performs in Chrysler Hall

Monique McCloud of Little Neck Road, Virginia Beach, will be one of eight Tidewater Ballet dancers who will perform to Felicien David's "The Desert," a symphonic ode, to highlight Virginia Philharmonic concerts on Jan. 19 and 21, 8:30 p.m. at Chrysler Hall in Norfolk.

The dance sequence of this symphony is being choreographed by Pat Sorrell of Virginia Beach, she resides on North Landing Road, "as a visualization of the moods and feelings of the desert," Sorrell said.

This Norfolk performance of "The Desert" is only the second American presentation historically of the composition, which premiered in 1844 in Paris.

Russell Stanger will conduct these Chrysler Hall concerts, which will also feature the Rachmaninoff Second Concerto with guest pianist Andre-Michel Schub as soloist with the orchestra.

Miss McCloud, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. McCloud, attends Lynnhaven Junior High School. She has been a ballet student of Gene Hammett at the Tidewater Ballet Academy in Norfolk.

Ticket information for these Chrysler Hall concerts is available by phoning 623-2310.

Children like movies

By LARRY AYDLETTE

Special to the Sun

Twenty Virginia Beach youngsters piled into the Virginia Beach Library's Kempsville branch recently to view a screening of the children's film: "A Cricket in Times Square."

"The children laughed throughout the movie," said library worker, Karen Kilpatrick.

"They hummed along as the crickets made music with their legs."

Every Saturday

Children's films are presented every Saturday at 2 p.m. at the library.

"Energy Guide"

Area Beach residents get new energy saving tool

Energy-conscious consumers in Virginia Beach will have a new shopping tool in 1980 to save money for themselves and energy resources for the nation — an "Energy guide" label on a number of major home appliances that are offered for sale.

Energy-conscious consumers in Chesapeake will have a new shopping tool in 1980 to save money for themselves and energy resources for the nation — an "Energy guide" label on a number of major home appliances that are offered for sale.

The Better Business Bureau thinks shoppers should learn to use this new tool with the old ones in making better decisions about what to buy.

What's covered, what's not

Energy cost and efficiency information will be required by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) on labels and fact sheets and in retail catalogs for several types of appliances: refrigerators and refrigerator-freezers, freezers, dishwashers, water heaters, clothes washers, room air conditioners and furnaces.

For each of these appliances, the FTC found that energy efficiency varies widely among all models that are offered, and that buying decisions might be influenced if shoppers know how each model measures up against its competition.

The FTC won't require energy information to be provided for five types of appliances: clothes dryers, home heating equipment other than furnaces, television sets, kitchen ranges and ovens, and humidifiers and dehumidifiers.

For these appliances, the Commission decided that the expense of testing and labeling wasn't justified, either because all competing models have about the same efficiency or because the variations don't offer big savings to consumers. Central air conditioners and heat pumps still are under study.

The new labeling rule takes effect for the seven appliances which are manufactured on or after May 19, 1980. Energy disclosures will be required in catalogs printed or distributed after that date. The FTC adopted its rules under the terms of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975.

Data on efficiency - cost

All ages are welcome and admission is free.

"It's something good to do on Saturday afternoon," Kilpatrick said, "and it allows the mother more freedom around the house."

"The films are shown strictly as entertainment for the kids; not for the parents."

Nine year old Michelle Kelly said her mother encourages her to go.

"I always like good movies," she said, "and I was coming to the library anyway to work on a book report. Mother gladly brought me here."

Chris McAfee said her three year old son Ethan "liked the movies, so I guess I'll keep coming back."

The rules require manufacturers to offer consumers the following information before an appliance is sold:

- How efficiently the appliance uses energy. If the frequency or extent of use doesn't depend on climate, this takes the form of dollars spent per year to operate the appliance in normal use at average costs for electricity, gas or oil.

- For air conditioners and furnaces, whose use varies according to climate, the measurement is an "Energy Efficiency Rating," or EER. All manufacturers have to evaluate their products under standard tests devised by the U.S. Department of Energy.

- How the appliance compares in energy efficiency with its competition. The lowest and the highest energy costs of EERs for all appliances of comparable size must be stated.

- How much it will cost prospective buyers to use the appliance. Operating costs must be shown in a table that lists various combinations of frequency of use and costs of electricity, gas or oil. Prospective buyers who check their utility costs and know how often they plan to use an appliance will be able to estimate operating costs for competing models.

Other tips

None of this will change any of the other shopping rules that are followed by smart appliance buyers. Needs should be decided in advance in order to avoid the temptation of expensive but unimportant extra features.

Future needs are as important as current ones, because major appliances should last 10 years or more. Shoppers should measure how much space is available for the appliance, and they should add the manufacturer's recommended clearances to the dimensions of the appliance itself.

Safety certifications — from the Underwriters' Laboratories for electrical appliances, for example — should be checked. Electrical circuits in the home must be adequate to handle the appliance.

Dealers should be checked for reliability, and if they can't provide satisfactory service when repairs are needed a source for this should be found before buying. Price-shopping often is worthwhile, particularly at model clearance times.

* Your oven doesn't have to be an energy eater. While the entire is baking, put vegetables and Seasoned Salt in a crockpot dish, cover and pop in alongside the main course.

* Meat salad salads aren't strictly summer fare. In fact, a sampling of salad dishes can brighten the dreariest winter evening. And, salad savings include a night off for the oven and use of a variety of leftovers. The experts at Larry's recommend preparing several salads: one using leftover chicken with grapes and almonds, another of shredded cabbage, a third with leftover vegetables marinated in Italian dressing. Arrange the salads on a "bar" along with a selection of dressings and serve with rolls heated in the toaster oven.

* A watched pot may never boil, but water will come to a boil faster if the pot is covered. This method saves both time and energy.

Medicare coverage gets simple explanations

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration - Virginia Beach Area

A sometimes misunderstood part of MEDICARE protection is the "Home Health Care" coverage. Sometimes people are confused to their homes because of an illness or injury and need skilled health services only on a part-time basis.

Those persons who need this part-time skilled health care in their homes can receive "home health care" from a home health agency. A home health agency is a public or private organization that specializes in providing skilled nursing services and other health care services to patients in their own homes.

Some of the Home health services covered by Medicare are: Part-time skilled nursing care; physical therapy; and speech therapy.

If a person needs either one of the above services, Medicare can also pay for Occupational therapy, part-time services of home-health aides, Medical social services, Medical supplies and equipment provided by the agency.

When care in your home is covered by Medicare the services you receive are counted in "visits."

For example, if you receive one home health service twice in the same day, or two different home health services on the same day, two visits would be counted.

Hospital insurance pays

Medicare hospital insurance can pay for home health care if six conditions are met. All six conditions must be met.

(1) you were in a qualifying hospital for at least 3 days in a row (the day of discharge does not count as one of the 3 days); (2) the home health care is for further treatment of a medical condition which was treated during a hospital stay or covered skilled nursing facility stay; (3) you need part-time skilled nursing care or physical or speech therapy; (4) you are confined to your home (a facility that mainly provides skilled nursing or rehabilitation services cannot be considered your home); (5) a doctor prescribes home health care and sets up a home health plan for you within 14 days of your most recent discharge from a hospital or participating skilled nursing facility; and (6) the home health agency providing services is participating in Medicare.

When these six conditions are met, hospital insurance can pay the full cost of up to 100 covered home health visits after the start of one benefit period and before the start of another.

These 100 visits can be used for up to 12 months after your discharge from a hospital or participating skilled nursing facility. The home health agency will submit the claim for your home care. You do not have to send in any bills yourself. The agency can bill you only for any services that Medicare does not cover.

Medical insurance pays

You do not need a three-day stay in a hospital for Medicare medical insurance to cover home health care. But, medical insurance can pay for home health care only if four conditions are met.

All four conditions must be met. (1) you need part-time skilled nursing care or physical or speech therapy; (2) a doctor prescribes home health care and sets up a plan for home health care; (3) you are confined to your home (a facility that mainly provides skilled nursing or rehabilitation services cannot be considered your home); and (4) the home health agency providing services is participating in Medicare.

When these conditions are met, medical insurance will pay the full cost of up to 100 covered home health visits in each calendar year - after you have met the $60 annual medical insurance deductible.

Medical insurance can also help pay for home health visits if you have used up the 100 visits covered under hospital insurance and need more visits. The home health agency will submit the medical insurance claim for your home health care.

You do not have to send in any bills yourself. The agency can bill you only for any part of the $60 deductible you have not yet met and for any services that Medicare does not cover.

What Medicare does not cover

Medicare cannot pay for: Full-time nursing care at home; drugs and biologicals; personal comfort or convenience items that you request, such as a radio or television; meals delivered to your home; homemaker services.

Homemaker services are services such as help with household tasks or preparing meals, shopping, assistance in bathing or dressing, or help in meeting other personal care needs.

Medicare cannot cover homemaker services because Medicare coverage is limited by law to services which are necessary for the diagnosis and treatment of an illness or injury.

Sever's disease

Young Beach athletes beware of "severs"

By DR. JAY I. TISCHLER

Special to the Sun

With the advent of an increase in Virginia Beach residents' awareness of physical fitness, many athletes are becoming injured. This article will deal with one particular type of injury to a particular type of athlete.

Adolescent athletes

Many adolescent athletes have some sort of pains, whether back, hip, knee or foot. This article will deal with heel pain associated with a condition known as "Sever's Disease" or "Calcaneal Apophysitis".

The child usually complains of pain on the bottom, side or back of heel area, near the insertion of the Achilles tendon. He will state that pain is present while running, walking, or while arising in the morning.

This is a result of an acute or chronic strain of the Achilles tendon on that heel bone area which has not fused yet. There is an inflammation of the growth center of the heel.

We find this is most prevalent in active or overweight boys between the ages of 8 and 13. With the increased emphasis put on women's sports, I have found in may practice an increase in the amount of females with this problem.

Self limiting

Apophysitis is usually self limiting and symptoms subside just as quickly as they came. However, some children do not respond and treatment should be sought after professionally where rest, aspirin, heel raises, crutches, and casts might have to be implemented.

There are many different degrees of pain associated with Sever's Disease. Once other disorders are ruled out, the cause of this condition must be treated as well as the symptoms.

No permanent problems will ensue after pain is eliminated and deformity will not be present.

Fireworks can be dangerous

Over 6,100 Americans were treated for firework-related injuries in hospital emergency rooms last year.

Many of these injuries were to the eyes and of these about 60 percent were suffered by children under 15 years of age. — CNS than 20 years.

"Transient work force"

The industry itself has traditionally been one with a highly transient work force due to a cyclical business pattern. The present economic situation and its recessionary effect on homebuilding represents a familiar downturn in the housing cycle.

In the Tidewater area some 3000 jobs appear to be at stake depending on how deep a recession we're entering. Looking at this on a national level, it appears possible unemployment will increase to 8.5 percent or more.

New merchant says

'I love the beach'

By GREG GOLDFARB

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

The son of a minister, Barry Jackson, 31, has opened one of Virginia Beach's newest businesses.

"The Store for Better Living," a 3300 square foot store located at 5277 Princess Anne Road, 331 Kempville Plaza, features an inventory of $75,000 in religious supplies, health foods, and gifts.

The store is owned by the Potomac Book and Bible House, Washington, D.C., but is managed by Jackson, a Takoma Park, Md., native.

Jackson is the son of Carlton and Betty Jackson, who still reside in Spokane, Wash.

His father became ordained as a pastor in 1950 and is presently employed as director of stewardship by the Seventh Day Adventist Church, Wash. Jackson has one sister, Gwynne, 25, a secretary in D.C.

Elementary school

Jackson went to the W.C. Moffitt Church School, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, for grades one and two.

He attended grades three through six at the Richmond Church School, Richmond, Me.; seventh grade at the Pine Tree Memorial School, Freeport, Me.; grades eight through 11 at the Greater Baltimore Academy, Tranquility, N.J.; and graduated from the Garden State Boarding Academy, Baltimore, Md.

"I went to many schools," Jackson explained, "because my father's work caused him to travel quite a deal.

"But the only time I wasn't happy about moving was when we moved at the end of my junior year in high school. I wanted to graduate with my friends.

"But at that time my father had just been placed as head of an educational district in New Jersey and I felt I should go to school in the school system he was in. I chose voluntarily to change schools."

His high school activities included: Student body president in his junior year; co-ordinating student activities; singing in a barbershop type quartet which toured Penn., and N.J. working as a member of his high school annual staff; and serving as head janitor of the school.

"All students worked as custodians in the school," he said, "it was a way for us to work away tuition expenses."

Jackson enters college

A student at Columbia Union College, Takoma Park, Jackson's initial academic major was pre-dental, but changed to business administration.

"I just wasn't totally mentally committed to being a medical student," Jackson commented.

In college, Jackson earned money by working in various capacities, from being a monitor in the dorms, to serving as a morgue assistant.

How did he like the (excuse the expression) body business?

"I loved it," he said.

"I considered it a real learning experience. You learn to control your mind to the point that you divorce yourself from the notion that you're dealing with a person. But sometimes, you'd be moving a body and the head would drop and hit the table, and without thinking you'd look at it and say, excuse me."

"But all in all, I liked the business; many of the friends that I ran around with were also in the business."

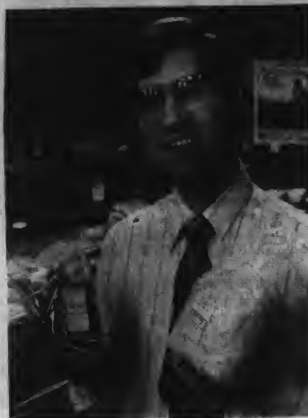

In a related occupational field, Jackson said he also drew blood as a laboratory technician at a local hospital.

"It was during this time that I also realized that I didn't want to be a dentist," he said, "I wasn't having social life."

Jackson gets married

Jackson married his wife Joy in 1971 in Norfolk. She had her bachelor of arts degree in elementary education.

"When we got married," he said, "I didn't have a job, even though I was trained as an accountant.

"So I took a job as a construction worker, because they were the only ones at the time who didn't ask me what my draft status was; and I was ripe."

"But after I graduated college, I got a job in my field, in Norfolk, working for a manufacturer."

"I stayed there two and a half years and left. There was not much job advancement potential."

Jackson decided he wanted to go onto his own business and entered into a partnership.

"I knew nothing about the foreign car re-air business when I started," Jackson said, "but I handled the books for it."

"After three months, however, I sold my share in it. There was not enough money in it for two salaries."

Subsequently, Jackson worked as an administrator for an academic junior academy; a lawyer, and for the Christian Broadcasting Network (CBN) a network programming assistant.

"I felt that I joined CBN because I wanted to be in more of a religious atmosphere," he remembers, "and I thought CBN would be a good place to work."

"Not only because of its religious orientation, but because it was a growing organization."

"But the department I was ultimately working in, the record producing department, soon fizzled out because in the record business, a lot of money has to be spent to make money, and CBN wasn't sure they wanted to spend it."

And before opening his latest business venture, he worked for the "Lister Committee Crusade Against Drugs," which is a national organization with representatives in different areas of the country.

"I went to high schools in the Tidewater area and presented the facts about drug abuse and prevention," he said, "in fact, I still do it."

"The Store for Better Living"

But Jackson's full-time occupation now is with the "The Store."

"What makes my store different," he explains, "is that first of all, I sell health foods, religious supplies, including a full line of children's supplies, and religious albums."

"Concerning health foods, I think I am unique because where as most health foods stores specialize in vitamins and supplements, I deal with staple foods for vegetarian diets."

"I think Virginia Beach has a strong health attitude, and I want to support it."

Attend church locally

Jackson, his wife, and their children: Rebecca, 4; and Christopher, three months, attend the Seventh-Day Adventist Church on Kempville Road.

Relative to Virginia Beach, he said: "I love this area very much; and doubt if I'll ever leave."

"I love the people and weather here, and will stay, trying to make this business grow as big as possible."

"I also plan to increase the services of the store to the surrounding community, in terms of programs and workshops."

Store hours

Jackson's store hours are: Mondays and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturday, closed; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Virginia Beach resident

Woodhouse asks City Council for help on street

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Back in 1962 when William H. Woodhouse was asked to sign over a 20-foot easement along the front of his property, he was so happy about getting a real street that he signed without a question.

So did his neighbors Robert and Eddie Hoggard at 636 and 632 Albertha Drive and one other neighbor who is now deceased.

No road for Woodhouse

Woodhouse, who lives at 640 Albertha Drive, in the Little Neck area, told Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon that he didn't mind giving up the 20 feet for a road, but he never did get the road.

He said that a man named B.F. Wolston, who owned a tract of land across the paper street Albertha Drive, asked for the easement, saying that he would give 20 feet, too, for a street. Woodhouse and his three neighbors signed the easement and waited. Not too long.

Woodhouse then searched out a lawyer who contacted Wolston only to learn that Wolston said that he had never had any intention of having the road paved, that he just needed the easement to sell his property.

The property was sold to several people in 1963 or 1964, Woodhouse said, and the Albertha drive residents never saw or heard from him again. The purchasers of the property, however, cannot build homes because they are not located on a paved street.

Virginia Beach has a participatory policy for street paving. That is, the property owners have to share in the cost of the project and the people who live on Albertha Drive don't have much money.

The hopes of the residents were revived recently, however, by a visit from Harold Hubbard, a planner from the city's Community Development housing program.

He looked over the street and listened to the stories of the people and then suggested they bid for their road at the Public Hearing of the Citizens Advisory Committee for Housing and Community Development Monday afternoon on projects for the sixth program year which begins July 1. The city expects to receive $3 million for the sixth year which will probably be spent on to projects which have already been approved for community development funds.

Woodhouse was the first of four speakers appealing for help.

He told Council that now that the Wolston property has been sold — along with the easement, he's afraid that some day he may drive home only to find a chain across the dirt road.

Property inherited

Woodhouse inherited the property from his father who died in 1946 and improved the three-room house into a seven-room-and-bath home.

He said that he would "bend over backwards" to have the street paved.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing asked City manager George L. Hanbury to check into the request.

John Haynes, Jr., representing the Mill Dam Civic League in the Great Neck Area, also has problems with paper streets in his area. The easements which the city had asked for to improve the streets would put some people out of their homes, he said.

He said the community is divided about half and half between senior citizens and young people and that recreation also is needed for the children. Nobody there has city water and sewer, he said.

Hanbury said that he was aware of the problem and had asked Ben Moore, Community Development director, to look into it. He said that the area is not designated as a target area but that Community Development funds may still be used there.

Goes back 10 years

Councilman Reid Ervin said that the request for streets goes back ten years.

Hanbury said that until Community Development funds became available to finance such projects the city was bound by its participatory policy.

J. C. Harris, representing the Stumpy Lake area, said the people had a drainage problem. He also complained about a paper street saying that the people had dedicated their land but nothing had been done.

Hanbury said the city was working with the City of Norfolk which owns Stumpy Lake to dredge the lake. He said the Stumpy Lake was also part of a major drainage study for the whole area and that he would be recommending funding in general obligation bonds.

Mrs. Ella Mae Gallop, representing the United Civic League, said that she had been living at 1515 Centerville Turnpike since before the city was established and was afraid the new developments would move the old residents out.

She said the road was narrow, the drainage poor and many people had outdoor plumbing and septic tanks. She added that the community also needed recreation for senior citizens.

Mrs. Mable Summers, representing the Lake Smith area, said the area needed water and sewers, home repairs, and the streets are "no good." The area which also has paper streets also has outhouses.

The speakers were encouraged by Hanbury to attend the Community Development Advisory Committee meeting on Wed. at 7:30 p.m. at the Center for Effective Learning on Witchduck Road.

Projects continue

Although no final decisions have been made on any projects for the sixth year, some projects from previous years will have to be continued, which, according to a report from Moore, "will make it virtually impossible for us to finance any substantial capital projects in any new target areas during the sixth year."

During the first half of the 1980 fiscal year, more money was spent or assigned than any of the previous four grant years. A total of $5,857,153 was spent or encumbered compared to $643,849 in 1979; $1,064,138 in 1978; $225,382 in 1977 and $360,050 in 1976.

During the past year the loan and grant program became fully operational as a great number of residents were assisted who otherwise would not have had anywhere else to go to receive assistance.

Water and sewer fees

Local residents recently learned that property owners in Virginia Beach should find it easier to pay water and sewer fees under ordinance changes approved Monday afternoon by City Council.

The down payment has been lowered and the balance of payments will be spread over a four-rather than a three-year period.

The old ordinance called for a down payment of one-fourth of the line fee in addition to all tap and meter fees. The new ordinance skips one-fourth of the line fee.

Also deleted from the ordinance is a provision that the total downpayment shall not be less than the total of the tap and meter fees.

The remaining line fee will be payable in four, rather than three equal annual installments at eight percent a year interest which is the most the city is permitted to charge.

Also deleted was a section relating to customers considered non-profit organizations who were required to pay one-fifth downpayment with the balance due in four equal annual installments.

City Manager George L. Hanbury said that the changes were made to help citizens who live on limited or fixed incomes. He said the changes will result in a sizeable reduction in anticipated revenues from water and sewer over the next several years ($333,750), but that he expected to recoup these funds at later dates based on the extended payment plan.

He said that bills have been held up pending approval of the action.

Complete count committee

Virginia Beach Mayor Patrick L. Standing has appointed a "Complete Count Committee" to help see to it that everyone gets counted in the 1980 U.S. census.

Kellam Jr., Council of Civic Organizations; Jayne Lawless, Pembroke Mall Merchants Association, Inc.; and Thomas Matthews, Martin Agency/Tidewater.

Pittman said she recently opened the business because "I wanted something to do."

"I had previously decorated homes for people, and I have an interest in antiques and collectables."

"I think we'll do well for the young people looking for new, but not expensive merchandise."

"Mini-Mart" under fire

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

The city should enforce the law and not depend on civic leagues to act as vigilantes, James L. Kaiser, president of the North Virginia Beach Civic League said Tuesday.

His remarks were made in conjunction with the opposition of the League to a beer off-premises license for the Sandpiper Mini-Mart, Inc. at 57th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

If the city's own Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance (CZO) had been enforced, the League maintains, the store would not be permitted to operate and there would be no question of an ABC license.

Investigation requested
Monday afternoon Councilman Reid Ervin at an informal meeting, of Council, requested an investigation which Kaiser stipulated should be contained in an "absolute, solid, legal brief."

Kaiser said the investigation should look into the licensing of the establishment, the enforcement of the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance and responses given by the city to citizens objecting to operations which are not only detrimental to the residents but are of questionable legal standing.

Kaiser said the League received no written response to two letters written to city manager George L. Hanbury on Sept. 13 and Oct. 9 of last year.

The Mini-Mart is located in former offices of the Mariner Motel which is in an H-1 Hotel zoning district. Ervin pointed out that the mini-mart does not meet the specifications for accessory uses and structures spelled out in the city's zoning ordinance which requires that there "shall be no evidence of the existence of such establishments from outside the property line. The mini-mart has access on both streets."

Ordinance requirement
The ordinance also requires that the accessory uses should be clearly incidental and subordinate to the principal uses and structures and that there be no evidence of the existence of such establishments from outside the zoning lot.

Kaiser said that the League had originally been told by the city that the establishment was permitted under a grandfather clause. However, the Mariner first applied for a retail license in 1975 after the CZO was adopted in 1973.

The mini-mart acquired a lease in 1977 when it first applied for an ABC license. Kaiser said this was turned down under virtually the same conditions that a second application was approved in December when Virginia State Delegate Thomas Moss represented the Mini-Mart.

Kaiser said the permit was turned down at the first hearing because it failed to qualify as a convenience store because it did not have the required 1000 square feet of space or as a grocery store under ABC regulations.

December approval
The application was approved in December by considering the mini-mart as a grocery store.

Residents in opposition to the application submitted a petition with 126 signatures and detailed testimony to no avail, he said.

The letters to which Kaiser said the League received no written replies concerned a request to have the city review operations of The Mariner as a whole (Sept. 13) and an examination of the League's objections to the ABC license (Oct. 9).

The Mariner had requested a variance from the zoning ordinance to permit rebuilding but the application was denied.

The Oct. 9 letter also requested a meeting with the manager or his representative to discuss the objections which were outlined by the League's attorney, Thomas S. Shadrick of Pender, Coward, Addison and Morgan.

Five objections
The five objections maintain:

- The applicant has maintained an unsanitary establishment.

- The applicant does not conform to the requirements of the city regarding zoning, traffic and parking.

- The characteristics of the business conducted upon the premises fails to qualify as a "grocery store."

- The place is so located that violations of the ABC Act or other laws would result.

- The place would adversely affect the real property values of the neighborhood or interfere with the usual quietude and tranquility of the residences.

New operations building
An art show will herald the opening of the new Operations Building in the Virginia Beach Civic Center.

Described by city manager George L. Hanbury as unique for city buildings, the show will encourage artists to exhibit and encourage cities to purchase art.

The art will be displayed in the building and will be available for purchase by viewers. The city will use a $5,000 state grant to purchase some of the art but has set $300 as the top price for any single purchase. Some day the art may be worth more than that, Hanbury pointed out.

The art will be on exhibit from March to June.

and all guests will be treated to a reception of refreshments.

"Buyer's" session slated for Virginia Beach locals

Grapes questioned

By DAN BERGER

Special to the Sun

A few weeks ago a story came across one of the wire services, dateline Washington, saying the U.S. District Judge Gerhart Gesell had ordered "concise explanations" to identify "principal grape types" and other data on wine labels.

Three consumers had filed suit challenging 1978 regulations handed down by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. One key ingredient of that ruling raised the minimum varietal content of varietal wines from 51 to 75 percent as of Jan. 1, 1983.

It was a rule that both the BATF and the wine industry agreed to, and it came after more than four years of public hearings — hearings that produced 24 volumes of testimony. And with a background of 44 years regulation of the wine industry, BATF felt certain the rules would suit everyone — wine maker, government and consumer.

The three who challenged the regulations claimed that by permitting "only" 75 percent minimum varietal content wine makers could do up to 25 percent "undisclosed blending," which was misleading to the consumer.

The wire story indicated that four years of hearings are out the window in a 90-minute presentation to a judge, and one industry source said a number of wine makers are irate that Gesell would ignore the last four years of hearings.

However, the wire story may have been a bit off base. Lawyers for the wine industry understand the judge's order to mean that if a wine is made up of at least 75 percent of the grape named on the label, and if the label says something like, "At least 75 percent of the wine in this bottle is made from the grape named," the BATF would approve it.

Louis Martini, interviewed about the latest turn of events, said one interpretation of the judge's order is that the wine could list on the label all the grape varieties used, i.e., "This Cabernet Sauvignon is made from 77 percent Cabernet Sauvignon, 20 percent Merlot and 3 percent Cabernet Franc." Presumably this would satisfy the three consumers who filed suit.

However, Martini said such a ruling is hard to accept: "My objection to that solution is that once you're up to 75 percent with the major varietal, the other grapes used in a particular wine are only one of many factors that make up the wine."

"I think the judge may have understood a varietal wine as the simple squeezings of a grape, but there's more to it than that. There are so many other factors that go into what a wine finally is — things such as the length and temperature of fermentation, the skin contact time, how long and in what you age the wine. I don't see how this one single fact — the other grapes in the bottle — is any more meaningful to the consumer than, for example, the oak treatment."

"Also, blending is not an insidious thing. It is done to improve quality, not to fool the consumer."

Martini has long named a number of his wines "California" rather than designate them as coming from Napa or Sonoma, simply because his grapes come from both counties.

"I make better wine by putting grapes from both areas together," he says, an indication that quality is more important to him than in the name on the label.

Unfortunately for Martini, however, the 75 percent minimum content that will be mandatory (presumably) by 1983 could force Martini to make a lesser wine. Here's why:

One of the finest wines Martini makes year after year is his Barbera. The wine is very rich and robust, a perfect accompaniment to Italian food, and it ages handsomely.

For years Martini has made his Barbera by a judicious blending of not more than 60 percent Barbera grapes and a number of other undisclosed grapes. The secret to Martini's success in Barbera is the blend, and he's not about to list the grapes by percentage on the label and give away to his competitors just how the wine is blended.

On the other hand, for him to make a Barbera, and call it Barbera, starting in 1983 he'll be forced to use at least 75 percent Barbera grapes, 15 percent more than he now uses to make a hugely successful wine.

"I think we can go to 75 percent by then and not upset the blend that much," he said.

He said he hoped that before then a firm rule is handed down that would permit him to simply state that the wine had 75 percent Barbera "rather than disclose the other varieties," and for that reason he's hoping BATF fights this recent ruling by Gesell.

The California Wine Institute in San Francisco is hoping, too, that BATF fights this latest ruling, "and if they appeal we would file an amicus brief with the court," said a spokesman for the institute. "And if BATF doesn't appeal, we still may ask for standing."

Duck season ending

Local hunt club meets

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoor Writer

Friday night the U.S. 17 Hunt Club held its annual banquet at the Grassfield Ruritan Club in Chesapeake. Charlie Richardson, the club president, had called me earlier in the week and invited my wife and I to attend, and I graciously accepted.

I had expected it to be just a quick dinner and the handing out of a few awards and trophies to the hunters that had bagged the larger racks; but I have to admit I was surprised.

Charley and the other club members had put together an evening that only men that know how to enjoy true fellowship could come up with.

The festivities begin

The festivities got started with the introduction of the special guest which included Lt. John Crumb, Sgt. Sid Akers and Warden Don Hinchey of the Virginia State Game Commission's Law Enforcement Division.

Also among the special guest was a man whom I had never met but had no trouble recognizing and that was Eddie Edgar.

Eddie has been the Outdoors writer for the Norfolk Ledger for over 30 years and his picture which accompanies his column has become a familiar sight to most hunters and fishermen in the Tidewater area.

Eddie Edgar not only has kept area sportsman up to date on the hunting and fishing scene over the years but added an additional contribution by serving 12 years as Commissioner of the Virginia State Game Commission. It was a real honor and pleasure for me to finally meet him.

After the introductions, Charley directed everyone's attention to the tables at the rear of the room which was burdened with one of the best buffet selections I have ever had the privilege attacking.

The menu included such favorites as Fried Chicken, ham, venison, potato salad, cabbage, baked beans, candied yams, collard greens, green beans, toss salad, hot rolls and for desert, banana pudding. There was still more to choose from but one can eat only so much and still keep track of it.

After everyone had made their several trips through the buffet line it was time for the awards. The hunters who were to receive the awards had been carefully selected by the Hunt Masters and Judges and the awards were appropriate for the category they excelled in.

Blader awarded

When a hunter shoots at a deer and misses it is customary to cut the end of his shirt tail off. The award for most shirt tails lost during the season went to Morgan Blader of Chesapeake. They should have given the man a new shirt.

Other awards that were given included the award for the most feminine doe killed and that went to Gerald Dixon of Chesapeake. An award was given to Erving Williams of Chesapeake for being the only hunter bitten by a deer this season. The safety award went to the President, Charlie Richardson, for going two years in a row without cutting off a tree stand.

The final award for the evening was the award that every hunter hopes to win, and that is the award for the largest and most perfect rack. This award was judged by the three representatives of the Game Commission, John Crumb, Sid Akers and Don Hinchey and was presented to George Freedy III of Chesapeake. George bagged himself an eight point buck this season that any hunter would be proud of.

After the awards were given and a few stories were told, Jennings "Buck" Richardson closed the festivities by singing a couple hymns in thanks for another safe season. The hymns were "The Old Rugged Cross" and "How Great Thou Art" and Buck did a beautiful job on them.

I have to admit that I had been impressed with the entire event. The fellowship that these men and their wives shared is enough to make any man envious and my congratulations goes out to the members of the U.S. 17 Hunt Club for a safe and successful season.

Virginia Beach residents learn

Extra jobs mean more
"Security" protectionYour
number's up

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration, Virginia Beach Area

Virginia Beach residents who are working at more than one job should make sure they are getting full credit in terms of social security protection.

A second job not only means extra money now, but it can bring additional income later when you might need it even more.

Based on annual covered earnings

Because the amount of your monthly social security checks are based on your annual covered earnings over the years, higher earnings now can mean higher benefits later when you retire. The higher benefit amount also would be payable to you and your family if you become disabled, or to your survivors if you should die.

To give you an example, the average wage earner who retired in 1979 at age 65 gets a monthly benefit of approximately $420. The benefit for the worker who has always earned the maximum amount covered by social security would be $553.

If you already earn the maximum covered by social security, earnings on a second job wouldn't change your benefit. But if you don't earn that much in your primary job, here are some facts that can help you get the most social security protection from additional work:

In most jobs, the employer automatically deducts the social security tax and reports the wages to IRS. However, if your part-time job is in the service trades or some type of self-employment, there are different reporting procedures.

If you work as a waitress, cabdriver, or some other job where you get tips, you must report your cash tips to your employer to get social security credit. Your cash tips count for social security if they add up to $20 or more in a month from one employer.

Written report to employer

You should give your employer a written report of your cash tips within 10 days after the end of the month.

Know your attorneys

There is a lot to consider when choosing a lawyer in Virginia Beach. The Better Business Bureau urges consumers to become informed so they can approach the decision intelligently.

The Sooner The Better

Most authorities agree that it's wise to choose an attorney before one is needed. That way, the lawyer is a known and trusted advisor by the time important legal questions arise.

Finding a good lawyer isn't necessarily easy or quick, and putting this off until the moment of need might waste valuable time and lead to a choice that is later regretted.

Almost all individuals and families need a lawyer sooner or later, for routine as well as unusual services. Many persons buy or sell real estate, plan their estates and prepare wills, and need business, investment or tax advice.

By choosing an attorney to help with these or other routine problems, consumers can avoid a "panic" search for one when something serious or complex arises — such as an arrest, injury or damage suit, divorce or bankruptcy. And, a lawyer unable to handle specialized problems usually can refer a client to one who can.

Friends and associates sometimes are able to recommend a good lawyer. A bank, a real estate agent, a member of the clergy or a social service agency may be able to offer suggestions too.

If personal, business or other contacts fail to produce a likely candidate, the prospective client can try directories. For example, the Martindale-Hubbell

In the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, on the 10th day of January, 1980.

Jean Perry Osborne, Plaintiff, against Joseph H. Osborne, II, Defendant.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is for the said plaintiff to obtain a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the said defendant, upon the grounds of having lived separate and apart for more than one year.

And an affidavit having been made and filed that the defendant is not a resident of the State of Virginia, the last known post office address being 4692 Linville Avenue, Kernersville, North Carolina 27284 it is ordered that he do appear on or before the 3rd of March, 1980, and do what may be necessary to protect his interest in this suit.

in which you receive the tips, or more often if the employer chooses. You can get Form 4070 (Employee's Report of Tips) at any Internal Revenue Office, or you can use some other form as long as it contains the same information as the Form 4070.

Your employer will collect from you your share of the social security tax due on the tips you report. He or she may either deduct the amount from your regular wages or have you pay it separately. Your employer is not permitted, however, to withhold either income taxes or social security contributions from tips that are being held for you.

For 1979 and 1980, the employee tax rate is 6.13 percent. The employer pays an equal amount. The maximum amount of earnings subject to social security tax is $22,900 for 1979 and $25,900 for 1980.

If your second job is working in your own business, your net earnings from self-employment count for social security if they are $400 or more for the year. Barbers, beauticians, some salespersons, and a variety of other service occupations qualify as self-employment. Self-employed people pay a social security tax rate of 8.10 percent.

Self-employed people pay the social security tax when they file their Federal tax return.

Wages from your regular job count first towards social security. If your wages total less than $22,900 in 1979 or $25,900 in 1980—the maximum taxable by social security—you pay the self-employment contribution only on the difference between the amount of your wages and the maximum covered by social security.

If the social security tax is automatically deducted from your pay in your part-time job, you may end up paying taxes on more than the maximum amount taxable. If this happens, you can apply for a refund of the excess tax when you file your federal tax return for the year.

To find out if you paid too much in social security tax in 1979, add the social security tax withheld by all your employers as shown on your W-2 forms. Then subtract $1,403.77, the maximum social security tax for 1979. The balance is the amount of excess tax you can claim on your Federal tax return.

For more information contact any social security office. The Norfolk office is located in the new Federal Building, Room 600 at 200 Granby Mall. Phone number 441-3401.

Lawyer Directory is available at many libraries and lists attorneys and their specialties. Further, in many areas referral services are available and can be found through the phone book or the local bar association.

Referral services vary widely in what they offer. Some provide little more than a listing of lawyers and their specialties, sometimes with fee schedules. Others are more elaborate and will counsel clients, usually for a small fee.

They will determine what services are needed or desired and how much the client can afford to pay, and they will help resolve problems without involving a lawyer if they can do so.

What To Look For

Once a prospective lawyer has been identified, it's time for an initial consultation. This will be worth a reasonable fee, which should be determined in advance, because it gives the client a chance to "size up" the lawyer in several important respects:

- Is the lawyer experienced in the client's specific areas of concern, and in those areas that are likely to be of concern in the future? If the lawyer is able to provide most but not all services, can he or she get enough help from others to fill the needs?

- Are the lawyer's fees reasonable? Are routine matters priced according to a fee schedule that is competitive with that of others? For more complicated work, do hourly fees reflect lower rates for services that can be provided by junior associates or "paralegal" nonprofessionals?

- Is the lawyer likeable and trustworthy? If not, the search should be resumed.

Clunks, Legal Plans

As the legal profession has become more competitive in recent years, there has been growth in legal clinics and prepaid legal plans, both of which differ from what has been the "traditional" lawyer-client relationship.

in the field who wish to use it as in-service training as well as to those who are seeking a position such as an assistant to a dietitian or a food service director. If a student in the one-year program is so motivated, he can continue to work towards a degree as a dietetic technician following academic year.

We think these programs are especially important today because of the need for qualified personnel in the field of dietetics and because of the rapid development of the public hospitality industry in Virginia. Here, a TCC, we try to meet the needs of the community as well as those of our students.

Today college counts!

TCC 'grad' certified

Today college counts

By RICHARD E. HOEHLIN

Special to the Sun

Recently, we were notified that the first graduating member of our dietetic program here at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College has now become a certified member of the American Dietetic Association.

Delores Milien

Delores Milien of Hampton received her membership this fall after also completing 450 hours of work under the guidance of a registered hospital technician. Upon graduating from our program, Milien received an associate in applied science degree in business technology with a specialty in institutional management.

She is qualified to become a food service manager in a hospital or nursing home where she would work in conjunction with a dietician.

Milien participated in our new program entitled Hotel-Restaurant-Institutional Management. It is a six-quarter, two-year program, with three-pronged approach. Students can specialize in institutional management as Miss Milien did. That specialization is structured to meet the American Dietetic Association membership requirements in the Dietetic Technician category.

Specialties

Or, students have their choice of two other specialties: food service management and hotel-motel management. These graduates are equipped to enter full-time executive training and management positions in the hospitality industry.

The curriculum provides a general education and a realistic and practical concentration in the area of public hospitality administration. Students develop a working grasp of the principles of hotel and restaurant management and also become familiar with technical methods which enable them to meet the challenges of one of the largest and most important of the country's business enterprises.

Upon completion of the course, depending upon the specialization, our graduates are suited for jobs in hotels and motels, food establishments, recreation centers, college feeding complexes, hospitals, resorts, clubs, airlines and other travel and tourist operations.

Dietetic assistant program

We also offer a one-year, three-quarter program for dietetic assistants. We designed this program to provide upward mobility for personnel already in the field of dietetics. We also wanted to develop competency in food service management in health care facilities such as hospitals, nursing homes, retirement homes, schools, meals-on-wheels and day care centers.

This curriculum appeals to students already working

Beach women like Orientale

"Most of these women are housewives," said Virginia Beach resident and professional performer Janeda Jannone.

"They come twice a week for exercise and fun." Jannone is an instructor of dance orientale, which is a form of classical Egyptian belly dancing. She has been conducting dance classes at the beach for a year and a half.

"Everybody likes it," Jannone continued, "I get a lot of calls and referrals. Most people say they haven't heard of this type of thing in this area, and they're anxious to try it out."

The classes are taught every Monday and Thursday from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at the Friends School, Laskin Road. Morning classes will be held on Wednesday morning from 10 to 11:30 a.m.

"We spread the class over the week to give the ladies a couple days rest before coming back. Also, the body gets a chance to recuperate."

Jannone says dance orientale offers the students a chance to exhibit their dancing creativity.

"A lot of people don't want to be professional dancers," she said.

"Many of them are into disco, and dance orientale can help them because it tunes the body to make

Although Virginia Beach shoemaker Mahem Pope may question 15th century shoe quality, he has no doubt that new shoes are inferior to those made 50 years ago.

"Quality of new shoes is bad," said the 31 year old Banks College business graduate and 20 year shoemaker.

"Shoes were of a much higher quality when my father was young than now and cheaper."

"Shoe manufacturers use inexpensive materials, and shoes today don't hold up very long."

"That's why I'm in business," he laughed.

Beach council action

Borrow pits may be redefined

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

John A. Baum, Virginia Beach City Council's pundit on drainage, soil conditions and the like, said that he "used to think I knew what a borrow pit was but after reading a legal definition I don't know."

No wonder! According to a city ordinance, a retention pond is not necessarily a borrow pit although it is excavated and the product is sold as fill, just like any borrow pit operation.

The difference is not in the overall results, but in whether the operator has to get a use permit for a borrow pit.

The question came up in connection with construction in the Red Mill Farm subdivision where the drainage plan calls for the establishment of a "retention pond."

The excavation will produce over a million cubic yards of fill which the landowner is selling as excess excavated material. He has a land disturbing permit for the drainage plan.

City Manager George L. Hanbury said that when he heard that the fill was being sold, he considered the operation a commercial borrow pit which should have a use permit just like every other pit from which fill is sold. He issued a stop order until the permit could be issued.

The owner, Lakeside Construction Company, Inc., maintained it was not in violation.

City Attorney Dale Bimson agreed that there indeed was a loophole in the law and that because the retention pond was incidental to work of the subdivision it was exempted from the borrow pit ordinance.

The Code provides that an excavation permit shall not apply to any excavation necessarily incident to other work for which a permit is required and where the details of the proposed excavation are an essential part of the application for such permit.

Hanbury said that Lakeside has agreed to pay all taxes and fees which would be paid under a normal borrow pit operation.

Eric Anderson, vice president of Lakeside, told Council at the open Council session that "at no time were we trying to circumvent the borrow pit ordinance."

Council, however, continued until Feb. 11 a resolution on terms of the settlement between the city and Lakeside until some of the language is changed. Councilman J. Curtis Payne Jr. said that the ordinance was not in the best form.

Councilman Reid Ervin suggested that the language in the resolution be in line with the language in the code section covering borrow pits.

Council also directed the drawing of a new ordinance which would be more lucid and Baum wanted to see included a definition of a borrow pit.

A stop-work order also will not be issued during the period before Feb. 11.

Council members didn't seem to object to a borrow pit operation as such, but Hanbury explained that in fairness to other borrow pit operators who may be in competition with Lakeside, the company should have to go through the same procedures and pay the same fees. The city receives 6 1/2 cents per cubic yard of fill material sold.

Hanbury said that he has asked Planning Director Robert Scott to work with Bimson on an ordinance which will stipulate that when an excavator begins selling fill material the pit becomes a commercial operation and requires a use permit.

Ervin said that he didn't think the ordinance was intended to be interpreted in this way. "We're making an exception for one man."

Payne said he assumed operating a borrow pit without a permit had been done before. He learned about the Lakeside operation from a competitor.

The ordinance was intended to stop illegal activity, Ervin said.

Baum said that lawyers "need to be instructed so that they know about conservation matters so that when they write (ordinances) people will understand." They'll never understand if they're told, "No, that's not a borrow pit, that's a retention pond."

Hanbury said the developer has complied with all the other ordinances.

Ervin suggested that the definition of a borrow pit include a minimum number of cubic yards taken out.

Street closes
By a vote of 6-4 Virginia Beach City Council approved the closure of a 20-foot alley between 28th and 29th Streets and between Arctic and Pacific Avenues over the objections of one of the property owners.

C. S. Yoder, who petitioned for the closure, has a contract to purchase the underlying fee of the alley which is owned by Edwin Linsley Jr. Pending approval of the closure, Yoder plans to sell abutting property owners their share of the alley on a proportionate payment arrangement.

Clay and Margaret Manson, who own the Manson Hotel and two other abutting lots, opposed the petition.

Their attorney, Bruce Murphy said that the Mansons have a claim of ownership under adverse possession laws. That is, they have been using the property for 20 years. Also, he said, the only drainage for their property is through the alley.

Grover Wright, attorney for Yoder said that the Mansons said that they would object only if they had to pay for the land.

Murphy countered that the Mansons felt they shouldn't have to pay for land to which they had a claim.

The other property owners, Wright said, did not oppose the closure.

Voting against the application, mostly because of drainage concerns, were Councilmen Reid Ervin, George R. Ferrell and R.L. Riggs, and Councilwomen Barbara Henley, Councilwoman Meyers Oberndorf was absent.

The Planning Commission recommended approval.

VOG drive tops $100,000

The Virginia Orchestra Group Annual Fund Drive has now received more than $102,000 in supportive donations, which is approximately $20,000 in excess of such donations received at this time last year.

J. Riley Johnson, Jr., Norfolk attorney and Chairman of the drive, attributes the increased support to the enthusiasm of the community for the more diverse orchestral offerings of the Virginia Orchestra Group has been able to provide as a result of the merger of the former Norfolk, Virginia Beach and Peninsula Symphonies.

The Annual Fund Drive includes individual and corporate support. The VOG also receives contributed support from Federal, State and Local government totalling $149,500; and foundations support of $20,000. The total operating budget is $789,000.

The current season presents in the Tidewater Virginia area concerts of symphonic, classical and popular music under consolidated management.

The success of the fund drive will enable the Orchestra to expand even further its services throughout Eastern Virginia.

Council also approved the use in the ordinance of the name of official department that operates the market, the Department of Agriculture, rather than the Department of Farm and Home Demonstration.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley cast the sole dissenting vote because she objected to the same charges being assessed for uncovered parking slots as for covered parking slots.

Mini-Mart seeks to appease city

If the Sandpiper Mini-Mart screens its front window on Atlantic Avenue so that passers-by won't see the potato chips inside and removes the sign and spotlight outside which further advertise its presence, it should be in compliance with the City's Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance (CZO).

City planner Robert J. Scott investigated the store located in the Main Mariner Motel at 48th Street and Atlantic Avenue after the North Virginia Beach Civic League complained that the store was not an accessory use in an H-1 Hotel District because it was visible from the street.

Bimson agrees

City attorney J. Dale Bimson agreed with Scott and said that it would be difficult to prove in court a violation of the zoning ordinance.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that Scott's was a liberal interpretation of an accessory use for a hotel and that in effect "you are taking an H-Zone and making a B-4 (Business) out of it. . . If your opinion is valid," he said to Bimson, "it will make legal what was illegal."

Bimson said he would be glad to prosecute. Ervin countered, "You already admitted you don't have a case."

Hanbury said he would look at the code on accessory uses and try to narrow down the definitions.

Stant enters hall of fame

By RICK VAUGHN

Special to the Sun

Frederick T. "Bingo" Stant of Virginia Beach, has been chosen a member of The Catholic University of America Athletic Hall of Fame, announced National Alumni President Robert F. Constock.

Stant, who played on the University's 1940 Sun Bowl football team, will be enshrined at a special dinner on January 18 at the school's Caldwell Hall Auditorium.

A 1940 graduate of Catholic University, Stant played on the offensive line of the Cardinal team which tied Arizona State 0-0 in the 1940 Sun Bowl. Stant, however, may have better known for his boxing skills while at Catholic.

Fighting in both middle-weight and light heavyweight, Stant dropped only one decision in four years of collegiate boxing. In 1940 he reigned as the National Inter-collegiate Champion in the 165 pound class.

A native of the Norfolk area, Stant also lettered in golf at Catholic. While attending Georgetown University Law School following World War II, Stant coached the Cardinal football squad.

Stant received a B.S. in economics from Catholic before completing his graduate work at Georgetown.

Stant is currently of counsel to the law firm of Clark & Stant, P.C., the largest law firm headquartered in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia. He is also a Commissioner in Chancery in the Circuit Court of Virginia Beach.

Stant and his wife Bette presently reside in Virginia Beach.

Local anglers cited

Salt water fishing winners named

Virginia Beach residents have learned that anglers fishing in the 1979 Virginia Salt Water Fishing Tournament earned 3,675 citations for outstanding catches in the seven-month contest which closed Nov. 30.

Tournament contestants set Virginia records for gray trout, sea bass, croaker, and shark.

The colorful citations are awarded to anglers who enter catches meeting the minimum weight requirements for 22 eligible species. The citations are mounted on plaques and preserved under a coat of clear plastic.

Special release citations are awarded for releasing any size tarpon, sailfish, blue marlin, or white marlin.

Final tabulations show that the gray trout, white marlin, and spot were the most abundant citation-size fish. They accounted for 1,907 citations, more than half the total. Gray trout lead all species with 923 entries meeting or beating the citation minimum.

White marlin were second with 497 entries including 139 meeting or beating the 50-pound minimum, plus 358 released to fight again.

Spot is number one

The small but tasty spot, Virginia's No. 1 panfish, was third with 487 entries. The later carried a 16-ounce minimum.

The 923 gray trout meeting the 11-pound minimum was a record. This is 650 more than registered in 1976 when the citation minimum was raised from nine to 11 pounds. Topping the list was a state record 17-pounder boated at the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel by Frank Harrell of Norfolk. Two other gray trout surpassed the old record of 15 pounds, 15 ounces, poited in 1976.

Also, a record number of croakers was registered in the '79 tournament, with 236 meeting the four-pound minimum. Included were seven larger than the previous record five-pound, one-ounce fish caught in 1963. The new state record croaker weighed five pounds, nine ounces and was caught by Mason E. Logan of Poquoson, fishing at Thimble Shoals. One of the Tournament's original species, the croaker was dropped in 1971 because of lack of entries. However, the species has staged a strong comeback since 1975.

Joe Mizelle of Colnpick, N.C., increased the state record for sea bass to eight-pounds, eight-ounces with a fish taken off Virginia Beach. The old mark, seven-pounds, nine-ounces, was set in 1977.

Art Hodges

Art Hodges of Virginia Beach caught the largest shark ever taken in Virginia when he boated an 895 3/4 -pound tiger at the Chesapeake Light Tower. The old shark record was set in 1978 with an 851 1/2 -pound tiger.

James M. Boyd

In addition to the official Tournament species, Virginia marine gamefish records are maintained on five other saltwater fish. A new record for one of these, the sheepshead, was a set by James M. Boyd of Virginia Beach. He caught a 19-pounder at one of the islands of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel.

There have been 69,594 citations awarded since the Tournament's inauguration in 1958. The bluefish is the all-time leader with 11,057 citations followed by flounder at 9,618 and black drum at 8,132.

Locals learn

Tax brackets?

If you are a Virginia Beach resident and thought you were lucky because your 1979 income kept pace with inflation, you may feel less fortunate along about now, as you consider the effect of that added income on your tax bracket.

Finding yourself in, say the 40 percent bracket for the first time might give you nightmares about the tax collector taking 40 percent of that hard-earned salary, but that is not the way it works.

Such exaggerated fears, says the Virginia Society of Certified Public Accountants, probably result from widespread misunderstanding of our progressive tax system. The system attempts to link tax rates to the ability to pay, but it is not nearly as confiscatory as "40 percent bracket" might suggest.

Tax brackets fear

In fact, says the CPA society, there is so much confusion about the meaning of "tax brackets" that tax practitioners have begun using instead the term "marginal tax brackets" to indicate that your bracket affects only the leading edge — the last few hundred dollars or so, the margin — of your income. The rest of what you make is either taxed at a lower rate or not taxed at all.

The CPA society says taxes have been rising faster than real incomes because they reflect pay increases that are largely illusory, thanks to inflation, but that is not the result of weakness in the tax system itself.

Most of us have not just one but many tax brackets, each affecting a different level of income. The first $2300 of taxable income (after exemptions) for a single taxpayer, is in the zero bracket — no tax at all. (That's why what was formerly known as the standard deduction is now called the zero bracket amount.) Even if you make millions, your first $2300 still is untaxed.

Income over $2300 is taxed at 14 percent until it reaches $3400, when the rate climbs to 16 percent. At $4400 it rises to 18 percent and keeps on going up like that until, when taxable income passes $28,800, you begin paying over 40 percent — but on just a small part of your income.

If that's all tax bracket means, why is so much said and written about it? Because, the CPA society explains, the highest tax rate one pays applies to the last dollar of income, as well as to the last deduction or adjustment, and that's where the most important action is for a person preparing a tax return.

Don't overlook

If you are in the 40 percent bracket, for example, a nearly-overlooked $10 deduction can put $4 in your pocket. Fifty dollars of income that can be reclassified from taxable to non-taxable is worth $20 in cash. A $1000 exemption is good for nearly $400 in cash.

Similarly, tacking on a final bonus, commission, dividend or other item of taxable income can mean ringing up 40 cents of taxes for every dollar of earnings. Out on the margin, the stakes are high.

Which is a good reason, the CPA organization suggests, for doing a thorough job of checking financial records for the year to be sure you don't overlook a transaction from which your tax advisors might be able to realize a substantial tax saving.

C.E.U.'s awarded locally

By RICHARD E. HOEHNLE
Special to the Sun

Today college counts

This fall, the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College awarded Continuing Education Units (C.E.U.'s) to participants in programs which ranged from a class in flower arranging to a workshop in marketing and advertising for small businesses.

Among a variety of other activities, C.E.U. certificates also were awarded to participants in a short course on investments and tax shelters and to a group of nurses who took an advanced electro-cardiography workshop.

Recognition awards

We award these C.E.U.'s as recognition of participation in an organized educational experience with a qualified instructor which does not qualify for college credit. We also maintain a transcript here at the College for each student who participates in a continuing education program which earns C.E.U.'s.

The flower arranging and investment courses were part of our Spectrum program which offers a variety of non-credit classes each quarter. Through this program, participants may receive C.E.U.'s in other things such as disco dancing and dancercise.

We also award the C.E.U., however, for special interest courses sponsored by business industry and others. In this case, C.E.U.'s are important because they offer employers a means of recognizing educational and training programs which do not fall into the academic college credit area. C.E.U.'s provide an incentive to employees to continue their education because the units are becoming widely recognized as a factor in employee promotion throughout businesses, industry and government.

Businesses may apply

Businesses which already have established in-house training programs can apply for C.E.U. credits through our Office of Continuing Education here on the Virginia Beach Campus. We will send you all the information needed on the requirements and procedures for obtaining such credit.

In addition, if a business wishes to begin a class or program which would qualify for C.E.U. credit, our office will assist them also, not only in securing credits, but in course development, contracting of faculty and scheduling of classes.

Courses, such as small business financing, labor negotiations in small businesses and inventory control might be of interest to management level personnel. The College, however, also can help to develop courses such as supervisory skills for middle level management or public relations for switchboard operators or receptionists. Other examples of typical continuing education courses include substance abuse training or crash, fire and rescue management for appropriate city government employees.

As you can see, we can help to develop a C.E.U. course to fit the needs of just about anybody — from

In addition, handsome trophies are awarded to anglers with the heaviest individual entries, as shown below. They are sponsored by private firms interested in the promotion of saltwater sport fishing in Virginia.

Present sponsors include: Hopkins Fishing Co., Norfolk; Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Co.; Taylor Freezer Sales Co., Norfolk; McLeskey Realty Co., Virginia Beach; Mariner Motel, White Stone; Capt. Bob's Fishing Camp, Chincoteague; and Kline Chevrolet, Chesapeake.

A new decade for women

A new year and a new decade has just begun and with it the prospect of many more women in the Navy working in traditionally male oriented ratings.

In keeping with this "trend of the 80's", Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia Beach is not lagging behind. Aviation Support Equipment Technician Mechanic Second Class (ASM2) Bonnie Leigh Miller has been chosen NAS Oceana Sailor of the Quarter for January, February, and March 1980.

Her job? Helping repair and maintain aircraft towing tractors in Aircraft Intermediate Maintenance Department's (AIMB's) Ground Support Equipment (GSE) Division.

Sailor of the quarter

Petty Officer Miller's selection was based in part on her outstanding job performance and personal appearance, self expression, and high evaluations in her service record.

Some off duty accomplishments which also helped her clinch the Sailor of the Quarter title were: completion of a correspondence course in mechanical engineering from Chicago Trades Institute in October 1979 and pitching for the Bank of Virginia Beach Softball Team in July and August 1979.

Oceana's Sailor of the Quarter was also Sailor of the Month for her department (AIMD) during November 1979. She has worked in her current capacity of the air station since first reporting for duty in May 1978.

Each of us has a special day in our life which stands head and shoulders above others. For Bonnie, that day was December 17, 1979. When coming off the night shift, early that morning, she received a call from a co-worker informing her that the Navy's test results were in and she would be advanced from ASM3 to ASM2 on January 16, 1980.

Said Miller, "I was speechless and thrilled." That afternoon, her leading chief, ASC Harry Ayers, informed her of her Sailor of the Quarter selection. To this she replied, "I couldn't believe it. At first, I just stuttered."

Attended boot camp

A June 1976 graduate of Lion Central High School in Lion, New York, Miller joined the Navy in nearby Syracuse on July 22, 1976. She attended boot camp at Orlando, Florida, and upon completion of recruit training was assigned to Naval Air Station Memphis, Tennessee. Here, Petty Officer Miller served as an investigator in base security and attended ASM "A" School. From NAS Memphis she was sent to NAS Oceana.

As Sailor of the Quarter, ASM2 Miller receives a $25 U.S. Savings Bond from the Bank of Virginia Beach, has her picture prominently displayed on the quarter-deck of the base administration building, and is eligible for nomination as NAS Oceana Sailor of the Year. Additionally, Miller is entitled to a steak dinner for two at the Seahorse Club on base.

On January 8, Captain D. J. Michaels, NAS Oceana's Commanding Officer, presented a congratulatory letter to Petty Officer Miller for her achievement. Shortly thereafter, they dined together in the Enlisted Dining Facility.

ASM2 Bonnie Leigh Miller installs a carburetor on an aircraft tow tractor engine in a Ground Support Equipment (GSE) Division maintenance shop at Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia Beach.

to a hard working five man operation.

"It's been phenomenal," Pope exclaimed, "like a blessing from the Lord."

"People have just been coming in and coming in, from the first day I opened the doors."

"I started out by myself, and now, seven months later, I have five employees."

Pope counts fairness and necessity in regard to his business's increasing popularity.

"People come to me, and back again to me, because I treat them fairly," Pope said.

"Many people locally refer me to their friends because there is not another shoemaker nearby. Plus, I can give complete shoe service: from a shine to a stretch, and all alterations and repairs."

Halifax native

Pope, a Halifax county native, said he is glad to be working in Virginia Beach for two primary reasons: The people, and the weather.

"The people in Virginia Beach are really very, very nice," Pope said.

"They are easy to work with, and not overly picky about my work but of course, I do good work and I guarantee every shoe that leaves my shop."

"If it's not right, I tell people: Bring 'em back!"

"And the weather, it's perfect. No real harsh winters, and warm, if sometimes, muggy, summers."

His wife

Opening his own business fulfilled an ambition of Pope's, but the best thing to ever happen to him, he says, is meeting his wife Cynthia.

Married three years, she is a junior high school teacher in Norfolk.

"I remember," he said recalling his earliest recollections of his wife, "I was going to see my cousin McKinley Jones down in North Carolina, and I met Cynthia there by chance."

"My cousin said he wasn't exactly having a party, but to come on over and be social with some friends of his."

"It turns up that my cousin knew Cynthia's best friend, whose name was Janis Gordon. So my cousin McKinley and Gordon hitched Cynthia and I up."

"And it was the best thing to ever happen in my life."

Enjoy Tidewater

Pope, who holds a bachelor of science degree in accounting and business, said he and his wife enjoy themselves at several locations in Tidewater.

"We like to go to the movies," Pope said.

"We also like to visit local places like colonial Williamsburg, and attend music concerts or local theatrical plays. We read a lot too."

Pope is a three year member of the First Baptist West Mundem Church, Chesapeake, and is a member of its board of trustees; the Progressive Lodge No. 7, Norfolk; and Free and Accepted Ancient York Mason, two years, during which he has served as secretary.

Cape Henry Dolphins

Beach wrestlers win

By GREG GOLDFARB

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Four members of Cape Henry Collegiate School's unprecedented wrestling team, the Dolphins, were victorious after its first match of the season with Norfolk Collegiate.

Winning Dolphins were: Mike Pender, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Pender, a 112 lb. sophomore; Mark Attlesley, 16, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Attlesley, a 119 lb. junior; Mike Wyles, 15, Dr. and Mrs. R.J. Wyles, a 126 lb. sophomore, and Jon Culberson, 18, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culberson, a senior, universal (unlimited weight).

The team did well

"I was real pleased with the team's performance," said first year wrestling coach Steve Davidson.
"It was the first match many of our wrestlers had ever seen, much less wrestled in."

"Our main problem, however, was with nerves. The guys would start out winning their match, but then, unexpectedly lose."

Metro district

A Cox High School graduate, and Virginia Tech scholarship wrestler, Davidson said this is a builder year for the team, and will continue to wrestle other teams inside and out of the Metro wrestling district.

"We are one of six schools in the district," he said, "but we're the only one with a wrestling team."

"We're trying to get some experience so when the other schools start their wrestling programs, we'll be ready for them."

And, as Cape Henry athletic director Tom Barnes said, "O're jumping out early."

The Dolphins next match will be on Wednesday, Jan. 30 against Suffolk Collegiate. They lost to Norfolk Collegiate, 42 to 21.

Beach business

A house of many treasures

"We have warehouses in Pungo filled to the brim with merchandise," said Virginia Beach businesswoman Billie Merrell.

"That allows me to discount 85% of our store items up to 50% under retail."

An Oklahoma native, Merrell, 53, has been a beach resident for 13 years.

Opened in 1976

Her store, "The Treasure House," located at 4801 Shore Drive in the Bayside shopping center, was opened in 1976.

"Originally when we opened," Merrell explained, "we were in the same shopping center as we are now, only in a smaller store."

"But our business, and inventory, kept growing so we moved down a few stores, knocked out a wall, and made a larger store."

Working in constant consultation with her husband Gene, a retired Navy Captain, Merrell said her business, and prices, are affected by the availability of the goods she sells.

"The only work I had done previously," she said, "was secretarial."

"But I really didn't really get into that business too much; being the wife of a Navy man, I always felt like I was in the Navy because I was always with my husband, and other Navy people."

"But after he retired, I decided I wanted to try to run my own business."

"We had gone back to Oklahoma to visit some friends, and found out that a man we knew was already in the business I'm in now."

"He sent us our very first two large shipments

Great Neck area

Recreation center gets lukewarm reception

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

A $22,760,000 high school recreation complex in the Great Neck area has met with lukewarm response from Virginia Beach City Council members.

"We weren't going to build the recreation center anytime soon," pointed out vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. "I want the school but don't particularly want the rec center."

Councilman Dr. Clarence A. Holland, who represents the area where the complex would be located, said that he would rather see a recreation center closer to the center of population in the northern end of the Beach.

He said that he was in favor of getting as many recreation centers as the city can "when we could afford them," but that a center serving the northern part of the city should be closer to Virginia Beach Boulevard.

City Manager George L. Hanbury told Council at an informal session Monday evening that combining the center and high school would save "millions of dollars."

Members of the School Board met with Council to hear a presentation of the concept by Donal Riddick, architect with McGoaughy, Marshall and McMillian, the firm which, with Krummell and Jackson, has been engaged to design a new high school which will replace Cox High School.

The cost of the high school alone will be $16 million, $4 million greater than the cost of the comparable Great Run High School. Hanbury said he was surprised over the inflated cost in the few years since the Green Run School was built. The School Board, he said, has been planning on $12 million per high school. The Board will have to re-evaluate their priorities, Hanbury said, in light of the escalated costs.

Council asked for more time to consider the proposition. Riddick said that he would have to determine how long the plans can be delayed without delaying the 1983 school opening date of 1983.

Superintendent of schools E.E. Brickell said, "We need the school and had been counting on operating it in 1982." The plans have already been delayed one year.

Councilman John A. Baum said, "My reaction is favorable. It's on city-owned land, on a waterfront..." Preliminary plans show the school and recreation center connected by a theater on a 120-acre site on Great Neck Road. The recreation center is a one story building with a gym, gymnastics room, locker rooms, racquet ball and the usual youth and adult arts and crafts areas and an eight-lane, 50-meter swimming pool. The high school will be a two-story structure to save energy by cutting the roof area.

The outside areas will include a boat ramp, 16 tennis courts and basketball, softball, soccer, and lacrosse playing fields as well as a one-mile jogging and bicycle trail.

Riddick said that he was surprised over the estimated cost of the school which will have about the same capabilities as the Green Run School. The additional cost is due to inflation.

By combining the two structures, Riddick said the city can save $1,020,000 in capital cost and $35,000 annually maintenance cost.

By building a theater which can be used by both the school and the community the city can save $62,000, Riddick said. The theater would have an outside entrance.

Since the peak hours for the facilities would be different, parking can be shared for a savings of 200 spaces or $150,000, Riddick said. The remaining savings would accrue from single heating, air conditioning, electrical and plumbing systems.

Annual savings would result from energy and maintenance costs by having less exterior surface and swapping of energy between the two facilities during peak periods, and the elimination of at least one maintenance employee.

The city owns the 120-acre site and 10 acres across the road which could be utilized later, Riddick said, for football stadium parking.

Also in the plans are picnic areas, especially in the wooded areas. Riddick said the trees "are magnificent." The complex, he said would be unequalled in Tidewater and probably in Virginia.

The center would contain 100,000 square feet and the school and theater would occupy another 245,000 square feet.

Hanbury said that the Capital Improvement Plan (CIP) includes a school and recreation center. He said he had yet to hear "anyone say they don't want one (recreation center)." He said that the centers in Kempsville and Bow Creek have been successful. The Parks and Recreation officials would control activities in the recreation center and the school would control scheduling in the theater.

If the plan were accepted, but only the school is built at first Councilman J. Curtis Payne Jr. wanted to know whether the savings would be the same.

Riddick said that "anytime you stagger construction and have two contractors the cost will be more," that there would still be some savings, but not of the same magnitude.

Hanbury said that the decision was Council's but that "every organization I've been to wants to know when we'll have a center like the one in Kempsville."

Holland said that "anytime you stagger construction and have two contractors the cost will be more," that there would still be some savings, but not of the same magnitude.

Hanbury said that the reason for choosing this particular location was that it was the last undeveloped major area in the vicinity, that it was owned by the city and that 25 or 30 acres needed for a recreation center elsewhere would be expensive. The only alternate sites, he said he would recommend for a recreation center were Bayville Farms Park or Great Neck Park. The 120-acre site is on a six-lane divided highway and on a major bike trail.

He said he had not planned to recommend any recreation center at all this year, but that the plans were in the CIP. "I don't know of anything you have done," he said that has received so much approval from the citizens as the recreation centers.

McCoy said that recreation is popular in the city because of the young population.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing said Council was not prepared to give a go-ahead on the project "tonight," and wanted to know when Council had to make the decision.

THINGS TO REMEMBER TO FORGET

"Forget each kindness that you do,
As soon as you have done it.
Forget the praise that falls to you
The moment you have won it.
Forget the slander that you hear
Before you can repeat it.
Forget each slight, each spite, each sneer,
Wherever you may meet it.

Remember every kindness done to you
What'er its measure;
Remember praise by others won,
And pass it on with pleasure.
Remember every promise made,
And to keep it to the letter.
Remember those who lend you aid,
And be a grateful debtor.

Remember all the happiness
That comes your way in living.
Forget each worry and distress;
Be hopeful and forgiving.
Remember good, remember truth,
Remember Heaven's above you,
And you will find through age and youth
That many hearts will love you."

Virginia Beach residents learn

Cold weather doesn't deter local fishermen

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoor Writer

If you have been keeping up with my column over the past year you have probably become familiar with some of the regulars who seem to always catch fish no matter the atmospheric conditions.

It seems as though some of these guys could get a strike sitting on the side of their bath tub, and one of these in particular is Junior Grey.

Junior, who is a long time resident of the Chesapeake area has fished the Northwest River for over 30 years and has never been stunked. That is until this Friday when he broke his streak by catching a big zero.

Junior won't give up

Junior was so afraid that he had lost his touch that he returned on Saturday to load his creel with 37 crappie. On Monday he brought his father along and just to prove that the fish were still there the two anglers caught a whopping 75 crappie and three bass.

Junior wasn't the only winter angler down at the Northwest River this week. One of my old favorites Rowland Marshall donned extra clothing and set out to brave the winter weather and he too had success.

Rowland, who is frequently known as the "River Rat" managed to pull 12 nice crappie from the icy water.

Otis Nelson, who is the manager and owner down at the campgrounds, told me that only a few have been braving the wintry weather, but of those that do all seem to have some luck. Ed Tillman of Chesapeake caught 20 crappie on Monday and C.R. Walters, also of Chesapeake, brought back 10.

Head for the N.W. River

If you like to fish and have been having a hard time waiting for warm weather you might want to pick one of the nicer days we have occasionally and head down to the Northwest River and try your luck on some of those crappie.

Even if you don't have the experience that Junior and Rowland have with this particular type of fishing, I am sure you can pull out enough tricks to have a good time.

Boat show Sunday

Now that hunting season is over and we are in that lull between seasons, when all you can think of is the day when you can officially break out your favorite rod and reel and head for the water, I am sure you are looking for something to do to help ease the pain.

One thing that you might consider is the Mid-Atlantic Boat Show which begins this Sunday at Scope. I can think of no better way to spark my desire to be out on the water. Of course some of the boats that will be on display will make you dream a little also.

It will definitely be a good way to spend some of these cold evenings and you never know, you might be able to talk your wife into letting you take on of the displays; home or at least get an idea of what you will need to completely equip the boat you already have.

If you are interested in going out there, the displays will be open on the following dates and times:

Sunday, Feb. 3 from 1 to 8 p.m.; Monday, Feb. 4 from 6 to 10 p.m.; Tuesday, Feb. 5 from 6 to 10 p.m.; Wednesday, Feb. 6 from 4 to 10 p.m.; Thursday, Feb. 7 from 6 to 10 p.m.; Friday, Feb. 8 from 6 to 10 p.m.; Saturday, Feb. 9 from 12 noon to 10 p.m.; Sunday, Feb. 10 from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m.

With the early run on bluefish and black drum only a few months away you might want to start checking over your boating equipment and rods. If you use your boat in saltwater you might want to clean and lubricate the instruments and the moving parts of your motor even though you did it at the close of the season. Saltwater corrosion is stubborn and can reappear. Also you might want to test your motor and trailer just in case there are some repairs that need making that you might not have caught in the fall. At least you will have that much done when the fish start biting, and you won't have to worry about the extra expense right when you are ready to go.

If you have a boat that has an inboard engine and you leave it in the water year round you have probably experienced starter trouble when you are getting her ready for the season. One of the best ways to save a starter that is located in the bilge is to either remove it before storage or put a light bulb beside it. This will keep it dry and cut down on the rust and corrosion. I use to have to replace mine every year until I tried this little trick and now this starter is on its third season.

If you have any tips on mid winter upkeep or early preparation of equipment for the forthcoming fishing season, give me a call or drop a line. I will be glad to print them and give you the credit.

In Virginia Beach

Jan and Dean to perform

Magna recording artists Jan and Dean will appear in concert Monday, Feb. 4 at Rogue's Club, Virginia Beach Boulevard.

The show will begin at 8 p.m., and is produced by Whisper Concerts.

Jan and Dean (A.K.A. Jan Berry and Dean Torrence) used to sing together in the locker room of University High (Los Angeles, California) after football practices. From the shower stalls, their career skyrocketed to Jan's garage where they would harmonize the current radio hits with their friends.

"Jenny Lee"

The first Jan & Dean record was recorded in this very same garage with a home tape recorder. The song, entitled "Jenny Lee", was a tune inspired by a stripper that had caught the fancy of one of their friends.

Much to their surprise (and most everybody else's), "Jenny Lee" became an enormous national hit, number one in most major markets, the years was 1958.

In 1959, they had another top ten record nationally which also was recorded in the very same garage; this single was titled "Baby Talk" which was also number one in most major markets.

From that point on, they had twenty three more national chart records, that made it twenty five consecutive records on the charts from 1958 to 1966. Out of that twenty five, seven of those were top ten records.

Some of the songs they were most recognized for were "Jenny Lee" (1958), "Baby Talk" (1959), "Linda" (1962), "Surf City" (1963), the first surf song to reach number one on the national charts), "Deadman's Curve" (1964), "The Little Old Lady from Pasadena" (1964), "Sidewalk Surfin'" (1964). During their career, they sold over 20 million records world wide.

Along with friends, The Beach Boys, Jan and Dean represented the California consciousness and all that it implied: freedom in the outdoors and the easy going life style, fast cars and even faster women, summer fun in the sun, and, more importantly, just having a good time.

Helps Beach citizens

Builders, city officials, co-operate

By LIN J. COOPER

Special to the Sun

When the city of Virginia Beach and Virginia Beach builders can work together on projects that benefit all the residents of the city, it's good news.

Tidewater Builders Association and the Virginia Beach Office of Housing and Community Development have been doing just that for some months.

Distress signals

Beach boaters alerted

Virginia Beach boat owners have been alerted that new U.S. Coast Guard regulations, effective Jan. 1, 1981, will require operators of recreational boats 16 feet or over to have visual distress signals on board when travelling on U.S. coastal waters or the Great Lakes.

Visual distress signals also will be required aboard boats carrying six or more passengers, for hire and, at night, on boats less than 16-foot length.

Visual distress signals also will be required aboard boats carrying six or more passengers for hire and, at night, on boats less than 16-foot length.

Additionally, the regulations set up specifications for the manufacturers of visual distress signals to ensure that the devices are safe, reliable and effective when used in an emergency situation on the water. Those devices which meet Coast Guard specifications will be marked accordingly.

The entire text of the regulations is contained in today's issue of the Federal Register.

According to Rear Admiral Bernie Thompson, Chief of the Coast Guard Office of Boating Safety, the Coast Guard is establishing the regulations after receiving extensive public comment and consulting with the National Boating Safety Advisory Council.

The council is made up of state boating law administrators, boat manufacturers and representatives of boating organizations and the general public.

The Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971 established the council to advise the Coast Guard on safe boating issues.

October of last year, the association's manpower training program undertook to train 14 Virginia Beach residents for careers in the electrical contracting field.

The apprentices were unskilled and un- or under employed young men and women who were recruited through the Virginia Employment Commission Apprenticeship Information Center.

Following their six-week pre-apprenticeship training, all were placed in jobs with electrical contracting firms and are on their way to becoming licensed journeymen.

The city of Virginia Beach provided the funding for the course from Community Development funds. The idea was to recruit young persons out of certain targeted neighborhoods such as Seatack, Newlight, Atlantic Park, Gracetown and others.

A further objective of the program was the eventual realization of rehabilitation for the neighborhoods in question.

Benjamin Moore, Assistant to the City Manager for Housing and Community Development and Community Development Compliance Office Andrew Humphries as well as Ray W. Rudolph, TBA's Training Program Director, worked together to achieve maximum participation by the city as well as TBA members.

They succeeded, and the door is now open for further training program cooperation between the builders association and the city.

Recently Harold Hubbard, Virginia Beach's Community Block Development Grant Housing Planner, has expressed interest in having area builders and developers apply their talents to build assistance housing.

The program is concerned largely with rental units constructed for the benefit of the lower income residents of the city.

ALCOHOLISM
IS AN ILLNESS
IS SIN

Today, alcoholism is considered by some to be an illness. It is compared to diabetes, asthma and other physiological problems as though it was hereditary or unavoidable. So-called "experts" have gone to great lengths to assure that no one will be blamed for this "disease."

Some self-acclaimed "authorities" would have us believe that alcoholics are either born with a chemical imbalance or develop a psychological and physiological dependence on alcohol as a result of some social or personal problem. They are treated as victims instead of offenders; therefore, all guilt is removed.

The truth is that alcoholism is sin. It is a result of man's depraved nature searching for satisfaction in life by trying to escape reality. Alcoholics need to face the truth about themselves instead of hiding behind pseudo-medical jargon about needing psychiatric help. Alcoholics are not sick and as long as the problem is dealt with as sickness, there will be no real lasting cure.

Any arresting of the drinking problem will either be temporal or replaced by a far more serious problem such as dependence on psychiatric treatment.

There is help for alcoholics, but only when the real problem is faced - the problem of sin - and the only cure for sin is faith in Jesus Christ.

Beach children learn history

By Melinda Kicklighter
Special to the Sun

Patriotic education was the focal point of a month and a half long study at Montessori Children's House in Virginia Beach.

The students, age two and a half to six are members of Junior American Citizens sponsored by the Princess Anne County Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution. (D.A.R.)

The children eagerly learned information about King George III, the Boston Tea Party, Thomas Jefferson, the Liberty Bell, and the parts of our flag, just to name a few items.

They loved learning about the Presidents. As each was introduced they would ask if they were still alive. Finally, Suzanne Hagens, age 5 asked, "Well are there any Presidents alive today besides Jimmy Carter?"

Mrs. J. H. Kicklighter, her teacher, showed all the children pictures of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Suzanne looked carefully at the pictures and said, "now I know why they are alive! They have brown and black hair and all the rest of those men had white!"

After all their studies were complete the Junior American Citizens boarded a bus and visited the Yorktown Victory Center and the Yorktown Battlefield. The children were thrilled to see displays about the Declaration of Independence, guns and cannons and a movie on the war.

One young three year old, Rachael Levin, summed up her trip: "We had a good time and saw lots of things.

Jonathan Adams, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Adams; and Brandy Viccello, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Viccello, take a few moments at the Yorktown battlefield to inspect a cannon.

But when we got to the battlefield the war was over, so we just ate lunch and came home."

Through Junior American Citizens, young children can learn a deep love and respect for America. If you would be interested in forming a J.A.C. chapter, contact Mrs. Kicklighter at 420-1776.

The D.A.R. supplies materials, you just have to supply the spirit.

School board reports

Beach attracts students

By JOE LOWENTHAL
Special to the Sun

The school year in Virginia Beach is half over, and still not a single student has transferred in from North Dakota. But, at last, there is hope.

It was reported last fall that 5,120 transfer students had enrolled in Virginia Beach public schools for the 1979-1980 school year. They attended school the year before in every state in the Union except North Dakota. They even came from 41 foreign countries and territories.

Although the school system's public information office has watched the situation closely, with the help of school secretaries and the office of pupil personnel services, still no North Dakotans.

"Sad news" The sad news about North Dakota has been the subject of newspaper columns, and the matter was also noted in the school system's magazine for parents, "Insight." Finally, all that publicity is apparently going to pay off.

Recently the public information office received a letter from Beverly M. Trieglaff of Grand Forks, North Dakota. It began, "Pending your approval, four North Dakota children will be transferred to the Virginia Beach public school system in order to delete the state's conspicuous absence of representative students from the enrollment tallies."

Mrs. Trieglaff said she and her husband, Murray, would unselfishly sacrifice their four dependents to help the system with the problem she had learned of by reading the November issue of Insight.

The letter went on, "We will happily join them upon receipt of job offers in your scenic city...With the children's suitcases packed and inoculation records in hand, we await your decision."

Already planned a move A P.S. explained that the Trieglaffs had planned to sell everything and move to Virginia Beach this summer anyway, but that the process might be speeded up if jobs could be found before then, thus eliminating North Dakota from the "missing" column for transfer students this school year.

Was the letter on the level? Are the Trieglaffs really looking for jobs in Virginia Beach? Are they seriously planning to move to Virginia Beach? The answer to all three questions turns out to be "yes."

Contacted by telephone, Beverly Trieglaff explained that she is originally from Posquoson and that her college roommate at Frederick College in Portsmouth (now the Portsmouth campus of Tidewater Community College) lives in Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Trieglaff has been visiting her in Virginia Beach every summer for the past several years. The former roommate, Peggy Bogan, and her husband Theodore, have a child at Kempville Elementary School.

They forwarded their November issue of Insight to the Trieglaffs in North Dakota.

Twin girls The girls have twin girls, aged 12, Denise and Diane; son Michael is 10; and the youngest member of the family is Paul, 9. They are currently in the seventh, fifth, and fourth grades, respectively, and would definitely qualify as bona fide transfer students from North Dakota.

Virginia Beach rezoning

Seatack remains same

Council will have one to four months depending on further evaluation of the plans, Riddick said.

Seatack area rezoning

To its residents, "Seatack is the Garden spot of Virginia Beach and we intend to keep it that way," Rosalie Norman of 10 N. Birdneck Road told Virginia Beach City Council Monday evening.

In angry opposition to a rezoning request which would change a 4.54-acre parcel from R-5 Residential District to I-1 Industrial District on Birdneck Road south of Beautiful Street, Mrs. Norman said, "It seems anything distasteful is right for Seatack." Changing the zoning would be like the Japs invading Pearl Harbor, she said. "We no long sing, 'We shall overcome', but the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Rachel M. and Lawrence Kurtz had requested the rezoning to have uniform zoning on all their property. They own adjoining Industrial-zoned property. They also said this was the only access they had to the industrial property.

An attempt by Council Donald Merrick to rezone the property in the black community to B-2 Business District, which he thought would be less objectionable to the people, failed by a vote of 6-4 before Council denied the petition by a vote of 9-1 with Merrick dissenting. Councilman Reid Ervin was absent. Voting for the business zoning with Merrick were Clarence A. Holland, George R. Ferrell and J. Curtis Payne Jr.

Li. Comdr. Sam Jackson supported the petition because the property is in the high noise and low accident potential zone of the Naval Air Station at Oceana.

Calvin Spain, representing the applicant, said that there was no way the property could be developed as residential because FHA and VA financing would not be extending to areas classified in high noise and accident potential zones.

Sam Houston, who is on the Community Development Advisory Committee, said that water and sewer are being brought to the area with federal funds to improve a blighted area. He said he had the same noise over his home and did not mind it. He also pointed out that the property owner had no plan, "Just generalities," and that the site for a city recreation center is just across the road. "This is no industrial area," he said. "With developers coming up from Rudee Inlet, Birdneck will become a nice residential neighborhood," he said.

Spain said that it was "not realistic to believe you're going to have residential with conventional financing" in the area.

Councilman John A. Baum said he was concerned that although Oceana has doubled its operations since World War II, the Navy has not acquired sufficient land rights. If another federal agency - the FHA or VA - refuses to finance construction in the zone, that means that the Navy has taken rights to the property, he said.

Merrick said he suggested B-2 as a way of adding to the employment opportunities in the neighborhood. The residents were opposed to any kind of rezoning.

Seawall loses

Seawall Enterprises, Inc., lost its bid for indefinite deferral of a rezoning petition in Chesapeake Beach as Virginia Beach City Council Monday evening concurred with the Planning Commission recommendation to deny the application.

Attorney Jerry Denton asked for the indefinite deferral for attorney Wayne Lustig who has filed suit for Seawall in connection with the same property. City officials were unfamiliar with the suit.

Seawall had asked for a change of zoning from R-8 Residential District to R-9 Residential Townhouse District on two parcels totalling 5.14 acres on both sides of Northampton Boulevard between Lauderdale Avenue and Lookout Road around the perimeter of Pleasure House Lake in the Bayside Borough.

The existing zoning allows 30 duplex units while the proposed zoning would have allowed 46 townhouse units. The surrounding property is zoned R-8.

The application was opposed by attorney James

Pickrell for the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel Commission and for Clifton W. Golden who claims title to land on the left side.

Robert Smith, representing the Chesapeake Beach Civic League also opposed the rezoning and presented a petition with 1823 signatures of people in opposition.

Under Seawall's plan the residents fear the lake will have to be filled in part to make room for the townhouses which would interfere with the drainage in the area.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland noted that in 1949 a circuit court judge enjoined the owner from filling the lake.

The Tunnel Commission is concerned about the tunnel approach road which it operates in the area.

"We care"

Charles Hall has provided "We Care" arm bands for members of the Virginia Beach City Council. The arm bands are a way of showing the 50 American hostages in Iran that the people back home have not forgotten them.

Hale presented the arm bands to Council Monday evening.

Aquarians lucky

Virginia Beach Council hopefuls who were born under the sign of Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) may have a better chance of winning than most.

Or so it would seem. Four of the present Council members are aquarians and in their honor Mayor Patrick L. Standing read a resolution Monday evening at Council meeting.

Pointing out that Aquarians are for "progress and harmony," Standing recognized the birthdays of the four (out of 11) as John A. Baum, Feb. 11; Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., Feb. 15; Reid Ervin, Feb. 17 and Meyera Oberndorf, Feb. 10.

Forbes honored

The late Charles H. Forbes Jr. was honored in a resolution approved Monday evening by Virginia Beach City Council.

Forbes was founder and president of the Forbes' Candy Company, founder of the Virginia Beach Music Festival which provides the opportunity for hundreds of high school students in the United States to participate in band competition and served as a director of the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce. He was also a civil defense coordinator, a president of the Virginia Beach Shrine Club, a member of the Khedive Shrine Temple, the Royal Order of Jesters, the Virginia Beach Masonic Lodge, the Ocean Highway Commission and the Big Brothers/Big Sisters.

He was King Neptune in 1976 and First Citizen of Virginia Beach in 1977.

His widow accepted the framed resolution.

of merchandise on consignment, and we still get things from him now."

"Most unusual"

Merrell calls her store, the "most unusual gift store at the Beach."

"It features ribbons, wrapping papers, bows, greeting cards, stationery, candles, books, etc.," she said. "It especially appeals to those people that made crafts."

"This store has to do a terrific volume of business to maintain the continuous flow of merchandise we receive."

"That's why we put things in warehouses in Pungo, and a trailer behind the shopping center."

Love the beach

Merrell said she and Gene love the beach.

"Our family really loves the Beach," she said, "but to tell the truth, in the 13 years we have lived here, I can count the number of times I've been in the Atlantic Ocean on one hand."

Merrell and her husband live in the Great Neck section of Virginia Beach, and have six children: Don, 30, a glassblower in Rhode Island; Greg, 26, employed with an aircraft manufacturer in Oklahoma; Patty, 25, a teacher and gymnastics coach at Cox High School; Gary, 23, helps with family business; Bobby, 22, attending aircraft school; Angel, 18, a senior at Cox High School.

Merrell is the daughter of the late Otis Merrell, a county sheriff in Oklahoma, and Daisy, a housewife.

Merrell says she doesn't have much spare time since opening the store but reports that her husband manages to get in several rounds of golf a week.

"Now I'm happy, and Gene's happy," she said. "When I opened the business I was green. I thought I had holes in my head at first, but now it's coming along nicely, with the help of a bookkeeper."

A popular place

Merrell said her store attracts people from all over, and for all day.

"Of course people come here from Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Chesapeake," she said, "but I've even had customers from as far away as Newport News."

"And in addition, I've had people come here in the morning to shop, and they'll stay all day."
